Trustees will have to watch what they say

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Ramifications of the new Freedom of Information Act was the major topic of discussion at last Tuesday night's Haliburton Board of Education meeting.

Director of Education Stuart Baker said the act's Implementation Plan is broken into two parts. The first allows the public free access to any of the board's information. The second is designed to maintain the privacy of individual board associates.

As much information as possible will be stored in a computer, which will cost approximately $4,000. This way, explained Baker, if a request for information should come in, it can be obtained as easily as possible.

"The Act will have an impact on education," said Baker. Using an example, Baker said that students' permission might have to be granted before their names could be published on the Honours Roll.

As well, during board meetings people's names would no longer be called out, unless the board received the person's permission. Instead, the board would just use numbers, saying for example, three new teachers were hired, or one new custodian.

However, Baker insisted that the board will still share as much information as possible with the public, but keeping each individual's privacy protected would be a priority.

"It really is a good Act," said trustee Linda Mumford. "If more people understood it, they wouldn't be afraid of it."

To help people understand the Act, Baker has already held a one day seminar for school principals. He is arranging a similar seminar for teachers.

The Freedom of Information Act comes into effect on January 1st, 1991, and a newly-appointed committee will oversee the transition.

Two cottagers killed in blaze on Kawagama

Two Toronto residents were killed in a cottage fire on Kawagama Lake on Monday morning.

Police are not yet releasing the names of the victims.

The Dorset-area fire was reported at 1 a.m. by people across the lake. Police and fire crews arrived at the Mountain Trout House, where the owners supplied them with boats. The burning cottage had water access only.

However, by the time they arrived the cottage was completely engulfed. Using a portable water pump, firemen were able to put the fire out and left the scene by 6 a.m.

Officials from the Fire Marshalls Office and the OPP are investigating.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS...

There was plenty to choose from at Lynne Hoppenreys's studio, especially for self-confessed "loon nuts." Whether getting an early start on Christmas shopping, finding those Haliburton-made crafts, or simply enjoying the beautiful scenery as they travelled from stop to stop, the hundreds of people on the Studio Tour had a weekend to remember — despite what the weather forecasters had to say. Story, pictures on page 25.

Old council mistakes aren't easy to rectify

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Confusion over which comprehensive zoning by-law to use has led to mistakes, but Minden council feels that by not re-zoning three Soyers Lake properties, old mistakes would be compounded.

Bob Austin wanted council to over-rule a decision by the Planning Advisory Committee not to allow re-zoning of three adjoining properties. One belongs to Austin, one to Dale Austin Realty, and the third to a person Austin represented when he made his presentation Thursday night.

The lots are already severed and Austin wants the zoning changed from Rural to Residential Limited Services, which allows more flexibility for building. However, under the present zoning by-law, 86-26, the lots are not big enough. Modern lots must have 132' of lakeshore; the Austin lots have 105', 118' and 132' respectively.

Although 86-26 has never been passed by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs because of the dispute over flood plains, in 1987 the ministry told the municipality 86-26 should be followed.

The Austin lots conformed under the old by-law and were approved after 86-26 was drafted but before council put it into use.

"The lots have been created in error and are too small," said Deputy-revee Bern Berry, who also sits on PAC. People want lakeshore lots for the peace and quiet; that's not possible if houses are built too close together.

"I can show you (buildings on) 100' lots that are built discreetly with lots of privacy," Austin replied. Concerns about the environment can best be handled by other government

CHECKING THE MAP: At Saturday's open house to discuss Dysart's official plan, Jim Dymment, at right, had to answer many people's questions about development and lake capacity. Approximately 80 per cent of the 125 people who attended were lakeside dwellers, anxious to preserve their lake's water quality.

Past grievances rise again at OP open house

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Designed to be a forum for talking about the future, Dysart's Official Plan open house turned out to be a time to bring up old grievances.

Severances, condominium proposals, zoning changes and even road maintenance were on people's minds as they gathered in the council chambers.

"That always happens," Jim Dymment, the planner drafting the OP revisions, says of the way the meeting sometimes got sidetracked. "People are looking for a sounding board and are interested to find out why councils have made certain decisions."

Overall, however, he says 90 per cent of the 125 people who attended were concerned about preserving the existing water quality of area lakes.

Not everyone agreed on how to go about that.

One of the greatest contributors to lake enrichment is phosphorous. It causes algae growth, which deteriorates lake quality. When algae and weeds die, they consume oxygen; lake trout then die because of the subsequent lack of oxygen.

If a septic system is within 1000 feet of the lake, Dymment says, it will leak phosphorous into the lake. Therefore, to protect the lake, you have to limit development. Finding a lake's capacity will be one of the new OP's main goals.

One man suggested the Ministry of Environment should not allow septic systems within 1,000' of the lake. Dymment said that when approving septic systems, the MOE is more concerned about bacteria and disregards increased loading of phosphorous.

It's assumed one permanent dwelling is equal to 3.65 cottages in terms of how much phosphorous will be created. Many people retire to their cottages but if you treated each cottage as a potential home, "the lakes are already over-developed."

Other contributors include lawn fertilizers. "Golf courses are terrible. They want the greenest grass next to the water," Dymment says. Phosphates in the fertilizer are leached into the water. But people who cut down trees to make way for a big green lawn also do a lot of harm.

To control development, councils can use lot sizes as a tool. Right now there are two lakeshore designations under the OP. "That's just caused a lot of grief," says Dymment, who would like only one zoning with a minimum shoreline of 150'.

This prompted one man to complain Dysart council allowed new lots in Harcourt that were only 135', although the by-law calls for 150'. "So somebody palmed somebody else," the man said rubbing his fingers together. When asked later, Dysart planning administrator Jody Ainsworth said the severances were granted before new restrictions were in place.

Elephant Lake debate

There was a debate between two men from Elephant Lake whether more development should be allowed there. The lake is linked with Benoit Lake and because of the many cottages on Benoit, development was frozen on Elephant Lake several years ago.

One of the men wanted to sever some lots to build cottages, a request denied by council. Although Elephant Lake is very shallow, and sensitive to development, he says both Elephant and Benoit Lakes feed into the York River. Therefore, development on Benoit shouldn't affect Elephant and vice versa.

"I'm against it," said Andy Hillo, owner of Sandy Acres on the north end of Elephant Lake.

"You want wilderness," said his neighbour to the south.

"You want money," said Hillo. "I want protection — I've been robbed," the neighbour replied. "I want severances so I can have people near me."

A lake capacity study, Dymment interjected, would study the amount of phosphorous already in the lake and if it's not at its maximum level, will project how many new lots can be created. However, such studies can be expensive and the municipality "doesn't have an obligation to allow more development." If a developer needs the study to prove more lots agencies, he added. "We have a staff of hundreds doing alright for you."

Austin said the previous council, which approved the lots, was "far-seeing and objective. They looked to the future. People will want to move here. Bern, you moved back and we're glad to have you."

Berry and Councillor Bob Sisson sat on the previous council.

"You talk of wisdom and vision," Berry said. "I suggest that when the Official Plan was brought in (which included the new lot sizes), it said 132' frontage. Through error we carried on with 100'."

Reeve Ray Moore said that because the lots already exist, council should not stop Austin's rezoning. "You have a right to zone undersized lots if they're already existing."

"Is it not a corrective action we're taking?" asked Councillor Mike Maher.

"It's a mapping error that should be cleaned up," said Sisson, adding that council has had to fix similar errors in the same way.

Berry was the only councillor to vote against the re-zoning. Councillor Lewis Stevens was absent.

Council wants to move move ahead on sewer

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Tired of waiting for Ministry of Environment approval, Minden council wants to go ahead with extending its sewer line to service two houses.

"We have been waiting long enough," said Reeve Ray Moore, who originally wanted the work to start Monday. "We're sick and tired of the MOE delaying it."

The two houses are on the Bobcaygeon Road near the cemetery. They are hooked up to town water, but not town sewers.

Recently, the Toronto MOE office has approved hook-up for 75 lots at a different site. So Moore questioned why there would be a hold-up from

Water levels committee faces few at Friday's public meeting

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Co-operation among different regions along the Trent Severn Waterway was the key focus of a public meeting held by the Haliburton Highlands Water Management Advisory Committee Friday afternoon in Haliburton.

"We have all had good times and bad times, with both high and low water," HHWMAC chairman Bill Davis told the 30 people gathered at the Legion.

The three-hour meeting introduced the HHWMAC's new Terms of Reference. It lists the problems of water drawdown and the county's objectives, such as ensuring there is sufficient water for household use, and that interests of shoreline businesses are protected.

The Terms of Reference also lists committee members and how they are appointed. Three of the new members are also members of the Trent Severn Reservoir Lakes Council (TSRLC). Two other TSRLC are "ex-officio" or non-voting members. (The TSRLC was formed at this spring's Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association meeting.)

Davis hopes this diversity will help the committee find solutions to Haliburton's low water level problems. "United we stand, divided we fall," said Davis.

Also in attendance were non-voting members of the advisory committee: John Lewis, Superintendent of the TSW; Stan Flemming from the Ministry of Natural Resources Minden office; and Queen's Park representative, Maurice Lewis, from the Conservation and Water Management Branch. They were on hand to answer questions from the public, and to explain the necessity of reservoir lakes in relation to the TSW.

Superintendent Lewis explained the TSW's mandate of keeping a minimum depth of six feet in the canal system, and also ensuring a constant flow of water for environmental reasons.

"We treat the Haliburton region no differently than any other region up and down the waterway," he said.

Lewis expressed his disappointment at the lack of audience attendance, which Dr. Bill Brown, one of the new voting members of the Committee appointed from the TSRLC, took as a positive sign. "We are not jammed today because we have so much water this year," said Brown.

(When another, more vociferous public meeting was held in the summer of 1987, it was on a Sunday and attracted dozens of angry lakeshore property owners.)

Brown said the TSRLC members have appreciated becoming part of HHWMAC and congratulated the committee on its new Terms of Reference.

"All counties on the waterway need to get their act together and define their needs," he said. A fundamental re-dress of the water situation was needed, as well as a re-structuring of the whole system, "so more water is retained in the reservoir lakes," Brown added.

Following the speeches, all the representatives welcomed audience questions, which ranged from flow rates, to the equal percentage method of drawing water from lakes.

New fast-food outlet to open on Hwy. 35

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Drivers along Highway 35 should soon have a new place to eat.

On Thursday night, council approved plans for a fast food outlet next to the OPP office on the Minden by-pass. Owner David Honderich has already torn down the former sub shop and plans to build the Piz-za Hut-type restaurant immediately, chief building official Tom Huberchek told council Thursday night.

There will be no seating inside the restaurant, which will not be open in winter. Picnic tables, a fruit market and playground equipment will be behind the building, with ample parking in the front.

Councillor Mike Maher praised Honderich for the neat removal of the sub shop. The retired OPP officer approved the plan, joking: "I want all those guys at the OPP office to get fat."

Honderich's family is more well-known for feeding the mind: they are controlling shareholders of Torstar, which in turn owns The Toronto Star and Metroland newspapers, and Harlequin Enterprises (Harlequin Romances.) They have been summer visitors to the area for decades.

Developers will need letter of credit

Minden developers will now have to give the municipality a letter of credit to ensure all promises are fulfilled.

With all site plan agreements, developers must lay out plans for the building, as well as the surrounding property. Things such as curbs, berms and landscaping can be required.

If the agreement is carried out, council will release the letter of credit. However, if the developer shirks his responsibility, the letter of credit allows council to withdraw from the developer's bank account the money to complete all work.

Only site work, not the buildings, will be subject to the new rule.

Homemakers get new home

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

With a quick stroke of his hand, Allan Stott easily sliced through the bright red ribbon strung across the doorway of the new Red Cross Homemakers office Thursday afternoon.

Stott, a moving force behind the Red Cross in Haliburton County for nearly 50 years, then announced the office was open for business.

The new, brightly-lit office on the second floor of the recently constructed Haliburton Village Court, will serve as a satellite office for the organization's regional office in Lindsay.

The Red Cross Homemakers have been serving Haliburton for the last six years and began with only 10 homemakers. Today the organization attracts close to 50 homemakers, who service at least 160 to 170 area clients.

When the Homemakers began their work here, they operated out of a house. They eventually moved to a room in the basement of the Dysart library, provided free of charge by the municipality. Here they remained until Thursday.

After being in a basement for so long, one of the most notable improvements in their new home is the vast amount of light bursting through the windows. "Brightness!" exclaimed Kathie Harkins, Supervisor of the Red Cross Haliburton. "We really did have to move," said Ruby Way, Supervisor of the Haliburton Red Cross office. "In the long term, we had to be much more accessible to the public."

"This is heaven," said Mr. Stott, as he glanced admiringly around.

Lake development hot topic at OP gathering

are allowable, the costs should not be borne by Dysart et al taxpayers.

"But the municipality is going to get ten times the revenue" if the lots are developed, the man said.

"You need to give the municipality something they can hang their hat on, that it's not going to cause environmental problems," Dymment said.

The recreation factor

Another consideration for a lake's capacity is recreational use. With every cottage, there will probably be a boat. Too many cottages, too many boats, too many accidents. Dymment has come up with the following formula to determine a lake's recreational capacity: four acres of surface area for every unit. (A unit can be a cottage or a room in a resort.)

As Dymment goes over to a map to address someone else's concerns, Barbara Muma of Kashagawigamog says she was angry about how the open house was advertised.

Not a subscriber to The Echo, Muma didn't see the August 29 ad, or stories which mentioned it. When she phoned the municipal office for details, she was told no meeting was scheduled. (Ainsworth just returned from vacation and doesn't know how the mix-up occurred.)

At the end of July, Ainsworth sent announcements to all cottage associations, asking them to spread the word. Drag Lake's association went so far as to encourage members to write letters stating their concerns. Drag, Eagle and Kashagawigamog Lakes were well represented; 80 percent of those attending were seasonal residents or lakeshore dwellers.

Both Dymment and Ainsworth were not expecting as many people to show up. At a similar meeting in Cardiff, Dymment said, only 11 people attended. He estimates there were 125 Saturday. As well, he had asked that council members not be present. "It's supposed to be a meeting where people tell me what they think and sometimes having council members there precludes that."

Eagle Lake condos

The next questions dealt with Bob Bishop's condominium proposal on Eagle Lake. The MOE says municipalities are financially liable for septic systems of condominiums not built on sewer lines. Before Dysart considers Bishop's plan, it must decide whether it's willing to assume such responsibility.

Dymment suggested that condominium developers could be asked for a letter of credit, corporate bond or trust fund equal to the cost of replacing the system. This figure would be updated annually. Developers would also need emergency plans in case of failure.

"How do you stop the money from going into general funds," someone asked. "The municipality doesn't want to do the accounting" so financial arrangements would be left to the developer, Dymment said.

By making such things clear in the OP, Dymment says such decisions will be easier for council and prevent "politics" from coming into play.

Others were concerned about an earlier proposal. Re-zoning of three residential lots to allow condominiums was turned down; residents were afraid the zoning would be changed in the updated OP.

There will be no pre-zoning, Dymment says. Any land not developed will be zoned with restrictive uses, so the owner must go through the public process of getting it changed.

More importantly, Dymment wants to change zoning areas in the OP. For instance, in the present OP, mapped areas around Drag Lake — or any lake for that matter — would allow a new resort. In applying for the rezoning, only neighbours within 400' of the property would have to be notified, and the more extensive controls of changing the OP would not have to be followed.

But this does not mean tests have been done to prove the lake can withstand a major development. (With the closing of Camp Illahee, Drag Lake property owners are nervous that the valuable land might be sold to developers.) Nor does it mean people on the lake want a resort.

"Four hundred feet is not a huge area," Dymment says. Often councils feel obliged to permit such developments because, they say, "it's allowed in the Official Plan."

As well, Dymment wants zoning by-laws to say there is a 20 metre setback from the lake for all buildings.

Dymment will be working on the OP update during the winter. He hopes to have another informal open house just before the May long weekend. This will allow people to acquaint themselves with the changes. Then there will be a formal meeting.

Thanks to interest payments, the Haliburton Chronic Care Wing Expansion Fund has now reached more than $522,000.

In 1987 and 1988, seasonal and permanent residents raised more than $380,000 to pay capital costs of the promised 18-bed unit to be added on to the Haliburton Hospital.

Then-health minister Elinor Caplan postponed the project by calling for a study into the long-term health needs in the county. That committee is now formulating its report, although newly-elected MPP Dennis Drainville says the building of the unit is not linked with the committee's report. The unit will be built, he has promised.

Meanwhile, the funds have been raising almost $140,000 in interest, it was reported at the St. Joseph's General Hospital Foundation's annual meeting. St. Joseph's, in Peterborough, owns both the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals.

"These funds are very secure," says John Macdonald, the foundation's executive director. "They will continue to earn a good rate of return until they can be applied for use in the Haliburton area."

In a press release, Macdonald added that "those who donated to the expansion fund will be involved in decisions regarding the use of the fund once the report's recommendations have been finalized."

Dysart's OP draft plan helps chart the future

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The following is a synopsis of a draft plan of the Official Plan Update prepared by Jim Dymment, Dysart et al's planner:

Dymment suggests that when it comes to determining whether a lake could withstand more development, the Dillon method should be used by the Planning Committee, which should also keep in mind that quantity is just as important as quality.

For this reason, the major inputs of the model would be based on various components: the number of homes, cottages and campsites, as well as other uses which result in phosphorus input into the lake. Occupation rates of these buildings are

New reporter has publishing hopes

With his goal of owning his own newspaper one day, Brian Rodnick's experience at The Echo certainly will give him a look at all aspects of the community newspaper business.

Rodnick, 23, is The Echo's new staff reporter. In the next months, not only will he be given a wide range of assignments, but he'll also be trying his hand at photography and layout. Being in a small office also allows him insight on the day-to-day business operations.

In May, Rodnick completed his three-year journalism degree course at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute. He heard of the job opening through his fellow journalism graduate, Anne Hewitt, who was the summer reporter here in 1989.

This is his first newspaper experience outside the school. This summer, he worked for a large downtown Toronto legal firm. "L.A. Law it was not — not even Street Legal," he says of the reality of being a law clerk.

"Home" since 1977 has been Tara, south of Owen Sound — an area just ripe for a new community newspaper in a few years, he hopes.

"Brian should fit in well in the community," says Editor Martha Perkins. "He understands what small-town life is like and respects it. More importantly, however, he's eager to learn all he can and write as many stories as possible. He'll certainly get that opportunity here."

The Echo welcomes its new staff reporter, Brian Rodnick. The 23 year old is a recent graduate of Ryerson's journalism program and hails from Tara.

More proposals of Dysart's draft plan

as equally important and in order to determine this, an accurate survey and questionnaire would have to be mailed out to owners.

Dyment adds that it would be impossible to enforce seasonal occupation of these buildings and that the model should rely on user days which have been established through a survey of a particular area or lake.

Dyment described a previously discussed method whereby a lake's capacity for development was based on a level system. A level one lake would be allowed to register a 9.9 mg/m3 of phosphorus concentration. If a lake reaches a 10.0 reading, it becomes a level two lake and this would allow almost twice the development.

For this reason, the District of Muskoka incorporated a lakespecific criteria which states phosphorus levels a lake would be allowed to reach rather than simply stating that a lake should be maintained as a level one lake.

To put the above plan into action, council would have to find out how many buildings on a lake would raise the phosphorus reading by 1 m.g/m3. In order to apply a similar policy in Dysart, it would be necessary to obtain accurate readings on present phosphorus readings. Then council could determine an acceptable increase in phosphorus.

But Dyment warns that the Council could find itself a situation where it was deciding what an acceptable level of pollution was. To prevent this, Dyment suggests it imposes a safety margin, just below where a lake would change its level status.

Apart from the quantitative estimates of capacity, there remains a consideration for qualitative measurements of capacity. Dyment suggested that Council utilize either the Dillon model, or the present five-acre-surface-area-per-unit method to control congestion.

When the Planning Committee has established how it is going to determine lake capacity, it should then decide how this capacity is to be allocated. For example, if a lake with 5000 feet of undeveloped shoreline has a capacity of 10 units, should one property owner having 1500 feet of shoreline have the ability to develop all of the remaining 10 units? Dyment suggests that Council allocate on a fair share basis determined by the amount of developable shoreline divided by the remaining capacity.

Some of Dyment's proposed

policies include:

— Any proposed developments that exceed the 4 acres (1.6 ha) of water service per unit restriction will have to be supported by a professional study which addresses the following: boat traffic and safety, the impact on wildlife and fisheries and the present use of the lake, methods to reduce the impact of development on the recreational amenity of the water body.

— Using the Dillon model of calculating the environmental carrying capacity the following parameters will be used:

a) where the development is proceeding on the basis of seasonal development, Council shall consider each unit to have 0.4 times the impact of a permanent dwelling;

b) hotel and motel units shall be assessed on the basis of having 0.2 times the impact of a permanent dwelling;

c) campsites shall be assessed on the basis of having 0.1 times the impact of a permanent dwelling;

d) existing lots of record shall be assessed in accordance with the use permitted in the Zoning By-law.

— No development shall be permitted which could result in a springtime phosphorus level which would exceed 9.9 mg/m3 in a lake that doesn't usually register as high, or in a lake that already exceeds 9.9 and would result in level that was 10 per cent higher.

— All reports made to support any proposals will be at the sole expense of the developer and prior to making a decision regarding the proposal, the municipality will consult the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ministry of the Environment.

— The number of units on lakes that have been identified by the Ministry of Natural Resources as cold water fisheries, shall be reduced by 25 per cent.

Some recommendations that have made to date to the municipality of Dysart:

— Shorelines should be maintained in a natural state. No buildings shall be permitted on the waterfront;

— In rural areas, new residential lots in isolated areas which are not serviced by school bussing or snow plowing should not be permitted;

— Also in rural areas, industrial and commercial uses should be allowed where they do not conflict with residential uses and lakeshore areas.

HOT DOG FOR THE STUDENT: Hot dogs were all the rage at J.Douglas Hodgson Elementary School's open house on Wednesday. "It's the social event of fall," says vice-principal Dave McKinlay. After the 600 or so hungry guests gobbled down close to 900 hot dogs, they were invited to tour the school. Here, teacher Neil Cowie dishes out a hot dog to an appreciative student, Todd Hoare.

Convention bid is given green light

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Ray Moore has garnered the support of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce in Minden's bid to host the 1993 Ontario Small Urban Municipalities Annual Convention.

The three- or four-day event would be attended by 300 to 500 municipal councillors from across Ontario, along with their spouses and support staff.

Moore says the convention would be extremely worthwhile for the whole county. "It's never been in Haliburton before and since we are a small municipality, we thought we would give it a shot," he said.

Besides being good for business, Moore, who's attended several of the conventions, says they prove to be an excellent learning experience.

"We get the chance to meet many of our peers," he said, "and we find out that we share many of the same problems in looking after our communities."

The Chamber suggested that as part of the convention, bus shopping trips could be organized to tour different local artists and artisans.

In a bid somewhat akin to the Olympics, Haliburton's site will be up against at least three or four other communities. This year's convention will be held in Pembroke, and the 1993 location will not be announced until next May.

the Gravenhurst office to approve two hook-ups, which were applied for in April. "I can't follow their line of reasoning."

Council has been waiting for the town engineer to meet with a Gravenhurst official, but conflicting time schedules have prevented the meeting. Council wanted workers to begin work on October 15 anyway, because winter is approaching.

"On everything we do, we are obliged to follow MOE rules," said Councillor Mike Maher at Thursday's council meeting. "I fear repercussions because we're not waiting for their stamp of approval."

Council will vote on whether to go ahead without permission at its October 11 meeting.

Vacancies are everywhere as area feels the recession

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

You don't have to look far for signs that Canada could be heading toward a major economic recession — they're as close as the For Rent section of The Echo's classified pages.

"It's all part of this recession syndrome," said Stan Beard of Wilberforce. Beard is trying to rent a three-bedroom bungalow that belongs to his church. Before Wilberforce joined the Haliburton charge, this was the priest's home. Instead of leaving it empty, the parish decided to rent it out. "It's a matter of economics."

In a survey of would-be landlords listed in the classifieds, more than half said that the sudden appearance of vacant apartments and homes is a result of people pursuing jobs elsewhere.

"I think it's more economics," said John Dennys, owner of Kenmar Lodge. Out of the six cabins that he rents out each winter, only two are occupied. Little interest has been shown and he's had to resort to placing three rental ads.

"Usually one ad has done it," he said. "I haven't received half the calls I usually get."

Besides blaming a slump in the local job market as the leading cause for a surge in vacancies, Dennys break," said one landlord, who has dropped the price of his accommodation by fifty dollars a month. "People just can't keep up with the price of rent anymore."

Still more are renting out their homes because they've left the area and can't find a buyer. House sales are slow and those who have to leave, aren't finding owners to replace them. The best alternative is to rent houses out — you notice a lot more ads for large, "luxury" homes. Usually they're sold instead of rented.

There is a bright side to all this: For the first time in a long time, prospective tenants have a lot to choose from. If they still have a job here.

"You have to give tenants a

Army cadets learn more about respect than war

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

BACKS STRAIGHT. Chin up. Steps taken with precision and pride. And if you ask them a question, they'll even call you ma'am. These are teenagers?

Well, yes and no. In their green uniforms and red berets, these boys and girls are teenaged members of the 1129 Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps, sponsored by Haliburton Branch 129 Royal Canadian Legion. But after the drills are done, the cadet uniform comes off and the teen uniform goes on: jeans, over-sized t-shirt, running shoes that tend to shuffle across the ground and an indolent look in the eye.

Wouldn't a parent love to have such instant response to an order?

"I like the drill and the authority, because I get to teach now," says Janet Smith, who was promoted to corporal on Monday. (Other promotions to corporal were awarded to Mike Morrison, Richie Chaple and Jeremy McDuff. Corporal Jason Donaldson was the first 1129 cadet to qualify for his cross rifle and crown marksman badge.) Smith joined cadets because her sister was a member, and now is a senior member of the corps.

All the ordering about "bugs you at first but you get used to it — do this, do that," says 14-year-old Charlene Simms. The discipline is good for you and is part of what "gives you a sense of wellbeing."

"Most people think it's stupid," Kelly Morrison, 14, says their peers' reaction at school. "They laugh at you because you're in uniform."

"They think going to parties and getting drunk is a good thing," says Cristal Perrin. For all the scorn which sometimes come their way, however, she says "really they're jealous. They see you going on all these trips."

The trips. How about rock climbing, winter camping, canoeing, the biathlon (cross-country skiing combined with target shooting), and getting soaked in the rain on a weekend at Camp Ipperwash? Does this sound like fun?

It does to Charlie Clarke, who's just signed up. There's not much for teenagers to do in the county, and he looks forward to the activities planned by the corps.

Warrant Officer Dair was one of the 162 cadets in Canada chosen to go to Banff's Cadet Leadership and Challenge Course, earning him his gold star and wreath. Not many of his friends have had such an opportunity, one of which he's very proud.

Another of the corps' founding cadets is Kent Miller. Now that he's 18, he can no longer be a cadet, but he still makes his way to the Legion every Monday night to be a cadet leader.

Most cadets were Cubs and Boy Scouts — "Brownies and Guides," quips one girl — and "they're seeking the same enjoyment," Miller says. He's one of the few who wants a career in the army. "Everything I did here, I enjoyed it and that motivated me. Now I want to even more."

The younger cadets also speak of patriotism. "It's about respecting your country," says Karl Mueller, 14. "I don't want anything to happen to it."

"There's a lot going on these days and they're going to need us army people," says Charlene, to which Karl adds, "we fight for our rights."

Although they may get the Gulf Crisis mixed up with the Oka conflict over a golf course, these young people feel respect for country and others is an ideal to be fostered.

"Military weapons are a part of keeping the peace, as we saw at Oka," says Miller, who has a firmer grasp of the issues than some of the younger cadets. Like the others, he sees Canada's main role at home and abroad as a keeper of the peace.

"Rambo types" are not welcome, Miller and Captain Denis Allaire stress. When the corps first started, 90 teens were interested. "They thought we'd be running through the bush like Rambo," Miller says. After three weeks of drills, the number dropped to about 30. And that's a good thing.

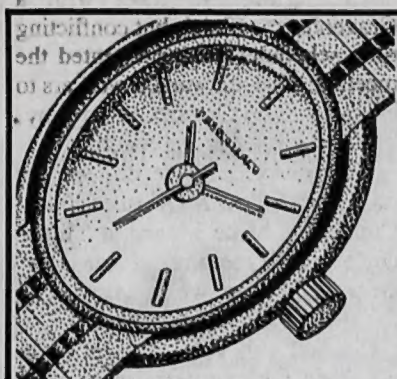

"Nobody is here looking for killers," Captain Allaire says. "We teach the opposite of that — self respect."

As the cadets go through their drills, treating visitors and each other with politeness, and sticking up for what they believe in, that lesson seems to have been taught well.

ATTENTION!!

Future plans

Dysart et al's Official Plan update is underway, and it while there is much work to be done before the process is completed and a revised Official Plan adopted, it is apparent that the update offers council an opportunity to exercise more stringent controls over development. Stronger, more concise regulations would be welcomed by just about everyone with an interest in the area's future, particularly if they are consistently applied.

Dysart has been a leader in local planning — it was the first municipality in the county to adopt an official plan — but it has not escaped criticism over development issues. Developers' first interest is to make a maximum return on a form of investment that always involves a substantial degree of risk, as well as considerable costs. They understand the rules of the development game, but being entrepreneurs, they drive hard bargains. Individual property owners usually have a different view of development, particularly when lakefront property is involved. They seek to protect their privacy and the aesthetic qualities of cottage life. They seldom welcome new development, even if it meets all the criteria of the official plan. Caught in the middle of this philosophical, environmental and ethical crossfire is the municipal council, which must seek compromises that will keep both sides if not totally happy, at least grudgingly respectful of each other, and of the planning process.

Despite having an official plan to guide it, Dysart council has never been completely at ease with its planning responsibilities. Councillors are not planners, and don't always have a complete grasp of the ramifications of their decisions. And too, the planning process has been hindered by the conspicuous absence of philosophical framework within it which it can operate. There may have been rules about the smallest size a lakefront lot could be, or about where commercial development could occur, but there has never been a broader understanding of the implications of development for the community's future. Can the community set limits on development? Can it erect barriers to the invasion of Haliburton cottage country by condominiums? Or should all forms of development be welcomed for the boost they'll give to the local economy? Are economic growth and environmental protection mutually exclusive, or can ways be found to cherish the best aspects of life in the Highlands without compromising the freedom of private enterprise to create new wealth and new jobs?

Recommendations developed by the planners carrying out the official plan update should help council do a better job of managing growth, and should satisfy many of the concerns of people who oppose development, particularly on lakes where cottaging is already well entrenched. There has never been an infallible method of determining how much development a lake can tolerate before water quality is irreversibly damaged. The Ministry of the Environment has used a set of mathematical formulae known as the Dillon model to provide an approximation of how many lots a lake can withstand, but it has always been imperfect — viewed as punitive by some developers and as too generous people opposed to the creation of new lots on cottaged lakes. Another method included in the Dysart official plan is a qualitative determination that says there should not be more than one dwelling unit for each five acres of surface area on a lake. Dysart's planners recommend that both the Dillon model and the qualitative measurement should be used in assessing the impact of development. If capacity is exceeded by either measurement, development should be restricted.

The planners also point out the impact of 'user days' on water quality. It is not just the number of dwellings on a lake that determines its future, but how many days those dwellings are occupied. In some cases, say the planners, permanent residents have less impact than cottagers, because more people use each cottage, on average, than use a permanent residence, and many permanent residents head south in winter. This view may be controversial, but it should prove useful.

The official plan update is an important step forward for Dysart, a process that is critical to the future that must be shared by cottagers, developers and business owners alike. L.P.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

Vacationing in your area this past month I have had more than a passing interest in the articles and letters in The Echo regarding the recent General Council of the United Church and the issue of the report on Membership, Ministry and Human Sexuality. The openness with which this was discussed from both sides in The Echo is characteristic of the frankness with which issues are dealt with in the United Church. This is both a strength and weakness. A leader in another denomination told me, that he admired "the honesty with which the United Church dealt with this and other issues". There is always a danger in "washing soiled linen in public." The immediate danger is that people know you have soiled linen. But then who doesn't!

I appreciated Bob Giuliano's attempt to interpret a ten-day (8:30 a.m.—10:30 p.m.) Church Conference, with an agenda of over 400 pages, in so limited a space. I may add I do not agree with his subsequent article about liberation through divorce — but that is another matter. I can understand Dr. John Trueman being not a little upset with the Giuliano article, given his perspective on this issue. I visited the Community of Concern in London in their place of meeting at Huron College. I wanted to assure them that as a member of the United Church and a brother in Christ, while disagreeing with some of their positions and much of their strategy, I nevertheless affirmed their right to be. I was warmly welcomed by their Executive Secretary, Rev. Gordon Ross. Gordon, according to press reports, has since left the United Church ministry but we were, and I trust will remain good friends. This friendliness was not a total experience in relation to Community of Concern members. The community to which Dr. Trueman refers was not as fully "open and loving" as he saw it from his perspective. One of their members told me: "Clarke MacDonald, you are the biggest Judas the United Church ever had." Another who has been a friend of mine since college days saw fit to accuse me of blocking the presence of the Holy Spirit at the General Council. I do not know if he qualified for what Bob Giuliano referred to as persons with "a crazed look" — but I certainly did not see Christian Love sparkling from his eyes.

What all of this boils down to is what I have said again and again when asked "What is the greatest need in the United Church today?" The greatest need is not for money, although we could do well with more of it. The greatest need is not for an exponential growth in membership although we would welcome more of them. THE GREATEST NEED IS FOR MORE GRACE. On my part as well as others. By "GRACE" here I am thinking of the words of the theologian of the fifties: "The grace of God is the love of God in Action." (Dr. John Oman)

One more comment. Like Bob Giuliano I greatly appreciated the contribution of the Youth delegate from Haliburton, Andrea Burton. She and her peers at the Council made a contribution far in excess of their numbers. Her report, as transmitted by your staff reporter Sally Ritchie, was "right on." One of her contemporaries put it well, speaking to the Council, when he said: "What we young people want to do is get on with the job of being the Church. There are issues of poverty, child abuse, human rights . . . that are far more important to us than who is sleeping with whom!" With young people like Andrea and her friends I am not worried about the future of the United Church of Canada. May their kind increase.

Rev. Clarke MacDonald,
Former Moderator,
Toronto.

No fat cats here

To the Editor:

Bob Giuliano is wrong about the business people of Haliburton County! These people who live and work here are not the Big B Business fat-cats of Roger Smith variety whose impersonal and ruthless actions destroyed the town of Flint. ("Roger and Me"). The business community in this county is just that — a community. These men and women are our friends and neighbours. We worship and "play" together, our children go to school together, and we all support one another as this county grows and changes.

I grew up here, and I am grateful for the variety of resources that are now here. When I was a

I THINK THAT WE ALL AGREE that it's hard to believe just how fast time flies. It's also hard for most of us to imagine that there is just three months until Christmas. Speaking on the subject of the upcoming winter, weather reports that have just been issued tell us that we are in for a really hard winter. On my way to Minden the other day I was listening to my car radio when one of the announcers was telling his listeners that according to the Farmer's Almanac we are in for a long, cold winter with plenty of snow. The winter, according to the Almanac, will begin early and will stay around a little longer than usual this year. For the business and the economy here in Haliburton County all we can do is hope that we will have a good snowfall that should be followed with some good solid winter business.

More funds than ever before have been raised through the generosity of the public by the Victoria-Haliburton branch of the Canadian Cancer Society. More than $100,000 has been raised since the campaign began in April. The total is $10,000 above the $90,000 goal. Funds raised by the Cancer Society throughout the year go toward local patient services, transportation of patients and research. All money pledged in Victoria-Haliburton is put to use by the local branch in this area. The Cancer Society's meeting is October 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Cambridge Street Baptist Church, Lindsay. Please phone 324-6896 if you plan to attend.

Glen Hodgson of Haliburton Lake pointed out to us that Camp Northland, a B'nai Brith camp between Eagle Lake and Haliburton, is having a reunion on Sunday, November 18. Quite a few local people have worked at the camp and they might be interested in attending. For more information call 416-630-1180.

The hockey season will soon be with us once again and local teams are already working out at the arena in Haliburton. The H.H.S.S. Redmen hockey club will soon be thinking of opening training camp and getting ready for the upcoming season. They will be back in the High School Hockey League once again and we can look forward to many months of thrilling high school hockey. Some of the local hockey men who seem to be in the know, tell me that the Redmen should be able to ice another excellent team. The fans are all geared up and just waiting for that opening game and more of the exciting hockey action we have come to expect from this team. We will try to keep you up to date on what's going on when the team swings into action.

Another session of instruction for senior drivers will be held at PineStone Inn and Country Club at Haliburton on Wednesday and Thursday, October 10 and 11. If you are interested in this instruction please contact Mrs. Sedgwick at 286-2671 for further information. The past three driving instruction courses were well attended.

Rev. Bern Warren will be the guest speaker at both services at the 115th Anniversary of the Haliburton United Church on Sunday, October 21, 1990 at 11:15 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. Dinner will be served in the church hall at 5:30 p.m. by the Anglican Church Ladies. Only 80 tickets are available at $10. for adults and $5. for children.

When the Registration for the Haliburton Minor Hockey Association was completed recently a total of 100 young hockey players had signed up to play hockey in the upcoming 1990-91 hockey season.

The women at the Bank of Montreal in Haliburton were telling me the other day that they will once again be having their "Warm and Woolly Christmas Tree" in December. Donations of knitted outfits, mitts, toques, old games and toys are needed to put on the tree which will be put up in the bank in the early part of December. The women went on to say that they will be having a Book Sale at the Bank of Montreal on Friday, October 26 and Monday, October 29. They will be serving free coffee and cookies and the proceeds will go to Haliburton charitable organizations. The gifts from the Warm and Woolly tree will be donated to local churches in the area.

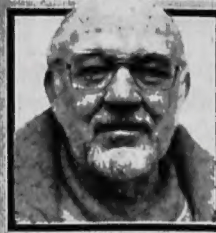

Here, there and everywhere . . . Douglas and Evelyn Hosgood (Nee Austin) of Burnaby B.C. visited with relatives in the village of Haliburton recently . . . I am sorry to report that a former Haliburton resident, Max Fetterly of Norfolk, Virginia, suffered a stroke recently. I understand that he is on the road to recovery . . . The Haliburton United Church will have an all-mens choir for its Anniversary Service on Sunday, October 21 . . . Royce and Dorothy Bain of Haliburton have returned home following a month's vacation in South Dakota, U.S.A. . . . Club 707, a monthly youth group for Junior High School kids ages 11-16, will be held the last Friday of every month at the J.D. ## AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

BELIEVE IT OR NOT the city seems like a more human place since the NDP won the provincial election. Folks just seem more hopeful. There is more laughter. There is even a sense of wonder at the mystery of life and politics. Everyone seems surprised, even the winners. Isn't it wonderful to be surprised again? Surprise and mystery had both disappeared from the political scene. Cynicism and a ho-hum what-else-is-new attitude prevailed.

Next door, in the basement apartment, there was a loud crash as dishes shattered on the floor. A husband and wife are into a yelling match. She breaks the dishes. Crash! Husband becomes incredulous. His voice softens. She yells through tears. Then there is a long silence followed by reasoned talk, then laughter and the sound of sweeping up glass. It's a human event. It is not filled with the hour-long bitterness accrued through years of powerlessness; The kind of bitter quarreling that the oppressed do. Rather, it is a human event in and of itself and it is over!

Just two weeks ago that battle could have raged like a spreading joust-fire. Now, because hope and the possibility of new life has returned to the forgotten, it is over in minutes and a woman and man are friends again. These are the folks who feel they never had a voice, a chance or anyone who would represent them. That has changed, in their minds at least.

Folks seem to greet one another in my neighborhood with a nod to the mystery, the magic of common people in government: laborers, street-wise blue collar types, dreamers and idealists, intellectuals and housewives. Somehow the purpose of democracy is clear again.

We all know that the back rooms of the Horse and Hound or the London Clubs are buzzing with the plans of people with lots of money and power as they get ready to discredit the government and prove their inadequacies. Strategies are already in place to get the people out of government and get business and corporate interests back in. We all know that, but still, for now, it's a human place to live, this place where folks have a voice.

We haven't said much by this election except that we would rather live with the mistakes of the inexperienced than be exploited by the self-interested. It's not saying a lot to simply declare that we'd like as much honesty and truth as the complexity of government can hand out. We were never fooled by image making, posturing, eloquent manipulation. We just tolerated it as long as we could bear being cynical. So we've said, "that's enough, we want to believe in our government again."

The previous parties weren't rotten to the core, of course. It's just that folks trust folks now, real people, our neighbours. We hope they won't be corrupted by power or co-opted by the powerful. We know they're vulnerable, but we hope they'll stay human for awhile.

In his speech election night, Bob Rae said something like, "We have to start to recognize what we owe to others, not what we can get from them." Most of this Province, the people, are ready for that and want to learn how to do that. We are selfish and a little sick of our constant self-interest. We want to believe in something bigger than a car, a house, a carrot.

It's just a little more human place to live now, this Province is, when the people don't feel powerless and helpless. A raging, dish-breaking battle comes quickly to an end, when husband and wife are not taking out on each other the despair and hopelessness of daily life.

Oh, the Kingdom of God has not come with the NDPs. If it had, none of us would have voted for it. But, it's a little more human now when money and those who control it get put on the bench for awhile. It's a little more human to be called on to recognize what we owe other people and be asked to put something back into this world.

It is also a little more human to discover that miracles can still happen, even in politics. Maybe, just maybe, God got out of church for a day and had some fun, just so domestic quarrels could stop when only the dishes get broken.

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

PRAGMATIST THAT I AM, I nonetheless rejoice that there are people who boldly take one side of an argument and do not budge. With unshaken faith, practicality is dismissed; if what they believe cannot be put into practice by the rest of society, then society must change.

In the pages of The Echo, two such voices are often heard: R.D. Lawrence's and Bob Giuliano's. They sometimes make people angry, they sometimes make people speak out in opposition, but most of all they make people think. That's the way it should be.

R.D. Lawrence is an expert about the environment because he has studied its minutest details for decades. Everything is interconnected; with every action comes a reaction and man must bear responsibility for the damage he wreaks. By our disregard of the laws of nature, our actions now threaten our very survival. It is no longer a debate about how we should act; changing our sinful ways has become a necessity.

Bob Giuliano focuses on the nature of man. The soul is very real to him, as is our ability to project our souls onto the world around us. Churches and towns not only have personalities; their spirits can be nurtured or destroyed by the way we act. He is able to stand outside our day-to-day world and observe and reflect. When he doesn't like what he sees, those reflections are honest and blunt, and to some, hurtful.

Fundamentally and intrinsically, they are both right. They speak of truths which go beyond the here and now. What they say has always been true, and always will be true.

Perhaps only a pragmatist can accept that, agree with what they say, and then go on to disagree with them.

First, Mr. Lawrence: This week, he speaks out against clear-cutting because trees alone do not a forest make. Rotten trees make perfect homes for animals, and provide eating places for birds. Micro-organisms in the soil, in the leaf, in the way everything interconnects, play a vital role in creating an entire eco-system. Man cannot live on bread alone; nature can not live on one species alone. There has to be biodiversity.

When we clear-cut a forest, we destroy all that. Trees may be planted and grow, but we are not recreating a forest. Although he disagrees that we should place any importance on aesthetics, you cannot have clear-cutting and tourism side by side, as the people of British Columbia are finding out.

Where I run into difficulties being as firm in my dislike is, not surprisingly, practicality — our demand for wood. I want people to read The Echo; trees need to be cut to print it on something. I prefer wooden furniture to plastic; trees need to be cut to make it. Time and time again I say clear-cutting is wrong, we've abused our world too much. Too often I then say since we need wood, let's be as efficient as possible in cutting it. When a situation arises that clear-cutting is suitable — and many conditions must be met for that to occur — then I cannot be against clear-cutting.

Second, Mr. Giuliano: Last week, he told local people to open their eyes and see not only the beauty around them, but the sense of well-being and contentment small communities provide. What attracted us to the area will attract others so let's stop with all this navel-gazing about how to attract more tourists — and then complain about how busy the streets are.

I agree in principle. The entire philosophy of The Echo is that small-town life has a value not to be gauged by size or proximity to "civilized" cities. Therefore what makes a small town what it is should be protected and the nature which surrounds us is our most compelling drawing card. Let cities do what they do best; let the country offer everything the city can't, primarily peace of spirit.

However, development in Haliburton County has been haphazard until now. There was no thought to the future and people were basically allowed to do whatever they wanted, all in the name of growth. At last people are starting to talk about where they want the county to go. Even more discussion should be fostered to ensure that the country remains the country.

At the same time, people have to be able to live here. To do that, they need to be able to work here. Already, the economic slowdown has meant people have been forced to move away. Businesses, including The Echo, have a legitimate right to be concerned about the viability of the local economy. If businesses aren't busy in summer, they'll close in winter. If locals don't recognize the value of open stores, where will their children find summer jobs, where will they go for contributions to another worthy cause, where will they stroll to peek in windows and meet their neighbours?

Business, resource management, tourism, development, profit, the lumber industry — these aren't dirty words. Until people start to abuse them. And that's when we need the Ron Lawrences and Bob Giulianos of the world. Their voices must be heard loud and clear, reminding us to choose the right path, telling us of our follies, demanding that we be wise in our decisions and forcing us to take responsibility for our actions.

Pic of the Past

This photo, taken about July of 1949, shows the late William (Bill) Gregory sitting in front of his Cabin on the shore of Haliburton Lake at the entrance to the Portage of Percy Lake. He rented boats on Percy Lake for $2.00 a day from his cabin. Mr. Gregory was known as the "grand old man" of Haliburton and at one time was one of the oldest citizens, not only of both Victoria and Haliburton County, but of all Ontario. In the early days he remembers clearing the homestead at Harburn and many of his younger winters on a trap-line in Algonquin Park. He once journeyed to the far north country to help in survey work for the transcontinental railway. An ardent hunter and fisherman he was held in the highest esteem and affection by his friends and neighbors in Haliburton. Photo Courtesy of B. Boyd, Percy Lake.

IT IS TRULY hard for me to believe, but this column will begin my sixth year reporting on "the view from here." That's something on the order of 250 topics we've reviewed together, though I must admit there have been some repeated subjects.

Over those years regular readers have discovered I have a weakness for — among other things — animals, new inventions, oddball occurrences, and reminiscing about radio days and other parts of my past.

I also have a few pet peeves — littering, monster trucks, neckties, exported sewage coming my way — and people who promise to build hospitals and don't. It seems that there were a lot of people in Ontario who shared my views on that bunch, and that's one area that's at least been resolved...

I would still like to see someone working on getting Haliburton a little higher profile — at least mentioning our area when they give the weather on the Global Network and on TV stations in Barrie and Peterborough — but nothing seems to happen. We'll just keep disappearing in the wilderness between Muskoka and the Kawarthas, I guess.

I have also had a few words to report from our traveling and camping trips from time to time. And a column a little over a year ago that my daughter Janet wrote about camping with the family when she was a child still gets mentioned to us from time to time by regular readers.

Janet brought her husband and two children up here for their holidays and insisted that they "camp out" in the original trailer that our family traveled in when she was a girl. She wanted to introduce them to camping as she knew it — and that led to the guest column that she wrote.

JUST IN CASE anybody has got the idea that I've given up the environmental stuff, here's a few interesting bits of information for you.

There are two marvelous Canadian environmental magazines just out called Earthkeeper and Recover. I had an issue of each given to me. According to the editors of Earthkeeper, "After removing the staples, you could almost eat this publication."

Recover seems to be equally recycled and recyclable. In the fall issue of Recover, among other articles is one that discusses a Council on Economic Priorities organization which publishes Shopping for a Better World. The book gives consumers information on what they are supporting when they purchase certain products. It answers questions such as: does a company perform animal testing? Is it involved in nuclear power? What is its environmental record? The magazine also contains a wealth of hints on how to better reduce, reuse, refuse, recycle, and recover the earth.

Earthkeeper's first issue has the Zero Garbage Lunch, Enviro-Journalism on school campuses, and information on the Environmental Youth Alliance, a most significant, nation-wide coalition of youth clubs. These are the people who will soon be voting and making themselves heard to hopefully force the governments to stop dragging their heels when it comes to serious environmental issues. The

"GEE I WISH it would warm up," she said, hunkering down into her jacket and pulling up the collar. They were splitting and piling more wood, getting ready for winter. This wood had been lying around for a year and was pretty dry. The log splitter gave a satisfying crack as its wedge dug into the massive pieces they were breaking up that day. Any wood that was still a little wet would be good and dry by January and there was plenty of wood to carry them through until then.

It was cold work. The wind coming in off the lake was straight out of the north and the trees, in their warm oranges and reds, seemed to mock the temperature by their very appearance. "Where's Indian summer?" he asked, hoisting another log on to the splitter. Fall was usually his favorite time of year but this year it had been, like the summer, a disappointment.

"Well at least there's no bugs," she said with a thin smile, echoing a common sentiment. They finished splitting, then loaded the wood onto their

Victory is sweet for Redmen football team

GRINDING OUT YARDS: Haliburton Senior Redmen running back Darren Danylyshen was a powerhouse in last Friday's game against Lindsay Collegiate. He scored four touchdowns to pace the Redmen to a 35-5 victory. The Redmen have now won a game and lost a game, and look forward to breaking the tie in Fenelon Friday.

Lindsay swallows a 35-5 loss

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

Victory has seldom been so sweet for the Haliburton Senior Redmen football team as it was last Friday. They were the underdogs going up against Lindsay Collegiate, a school with twice as many potential football players as Haliburton, and they lacked the advantage of home field. For the first 30 minutes, it looked like the Redmen were in for a tough afternoon. Although they led 7-5 at the half, Haliburton was plagued by errors, fumbles and interceptions that rendered their offense ineffective and handed Lindsay numerous opportunities to gain the upper hand. But the Redmen got a grip on the ball — and their game — in the second half, and left Lindsay in tatters, trailing 35-5 at the final whistle.

Darren Danylyshen led the offensive effort for the Redmen, slamming through Lindsay defenders for four touchdowns. The first and only TD of the first half came early in the opening quarter on a 25 yard run. At that point the Redmen descended into chaos, dropping the ball all over the field. The errors enabled Lindsay to rack up five single points before the

READY TO TACLE: An LCVI player is poised for a late hit on Redmen running back Darren Danylyshen, whose face shows the intensity of the action last Friday in Lindsay. The game was clearly played with few infractions.

Redmen play their best game

Haliburton's Junior Redmen soccer team played their best game of the season last Wednesday when they hosted Lindsay Collegiate.

Capitalizing on their offensive drives, the Junior Redmen maintained a one goal lead for most of the game, but eventually gave in to pressure from first place LCVI and had to settle for a two-all tie.

Strong defensive play helped slow the visitors down, though they had a number of scoring opportunities which they failed to convert into goals.

Mike Morrison and Jonathan Bishop scored the two Haliburton goals, with assists from Nico Haedicke and Darren Parsons. Excellent defensive play by Jason Falvo was a decisive factor in the outcome.

The Junior Redmen travel to Fenelon Falls this Wednesday for their first road game of the season.

Seniors triumphant

For the seniors, last Wednesday's home game was a triumph. With LCVI considered the best team in the league, the Redmen had their work cut out for them, but they rose to the challenge.

Jan Haedicke notched two goals for the Redmen, and David Carr drove in another to give the Haliburton club a 3-1 win against the visitors.

The Senior Redmen will be looking to add more points in the win column when they travel to Fenelon Falls on Wednesday for the fourth game of the season.

Seniors smash Lindsay, Juniors follow example

end of the half.

The second half began on an entirely different and much sweeter note. On the second play, Danylyshen snagged a quick pitch from quarterback Shaun Perrin and powered 40 yards for a touchdown.

Ryan Timbers' kicking game was in fine form for the first time this season. He was good on every convert attempt, and punted high and long to pin LCVI deep in their own zone repeatedly.

One of the prettiest plays of the game came in the third quarter, and helped set up yet another Danylyshen touchdown. Perrin called a quick pitch pass, tossing the ball to Danylyshen, who fired a perfect pass from behind the line of scrimmage to Jay Hughes, in the clear by at least 10 yards. The razzle-dazzle combination produced a 40 yard gain and put the Redmen in scoring position. Perrin then passed to Hughes for a three yard gain, and Danylyshen capped the effort with a three yard touchdown on an option play.

In the fourth quarter, Shaun Perrin went in for a touchdown after Walter Griffin intercepted an LCVI pass, and Danylyshen scampered in for his fourth TD to give the Redmen a 35-5 lead as time ran out.

Solid play by the offensive line was a key factor in the victory, as tight ends Mike Hughes and Steve Davis, tackles Ken Tousaw and Scott Murison, guards Jamie Dollo and John Vuksic, and centre Greg Hamilton opened up holes to keep the running game moving, and protected Perrin from the blitz.

The defensive squad was paced by the aggressive play of Chris Allaire.

Despite the intense rivalry between the schools, both teams stuck to the fundamentals. There were few penalties and many instances of opponents offering a hand to help each other up, a gesture of good sportsmanship not often seen on high school gridirons.

Juniors get second win

Following the example of the seniors, the Junior Redmen had little trouble handing LCVI their second defeat of the afternoon. The juniors notched three touchdowns on their way to a 24-8 win and a 2 and 0 record on the season.

Andy Bacon put the Redmen on the board first with a 70 yard punt return for six points. The convert attempt was missed.

LCVI went nowhere on their next possession, and when the Redmen got their hands on the ball again, they made the most of it, as Chris Greenfield went 75 yards off tackle for another six points. Corbie Kent tossed to Greg Brohman for a two point conversion that made the score 14-0 for the Redmen.

Haliburton dominated play in the second quarter, capped by yet another touchdown from Andy Bacon on a 40 yard reverse. Kent and Brohman repeated their two point conversion play to give the Redmen a 22-0 lead.

LCVI scored their first and only touchdown late in the quarter, and the score stood at 22-7 at the half.

The second half was a costly one for the juniors, as Corbie Kent, Jerry Cooper and Chris Greenfield all suffered injuries that kept them off the field for the rest of the game. First year Junior Kevin Morissette took over the QB spot and kept the offense rolling.

The Redmen added two more points on a safety when Peter Brohman tackled the LCVI quarterback in his own endzone. LCVI got a single in the third quarter, but it was all they could muster. There was no scoring in the fourth quarter.

Greenfield and Cooper are expected to be back in the lineup this Friday, when the Redmen travel to Fenelon Falls, whose juniors also have a two and 0 record this season, but Kent may have to sit out the game, putting the Redmen at a disadvantage.

The seniors will take the field in Fenelon at 2 p.m., with the junior game to follow.

ON TOP OF THE PLAY: Curry Motors' Andrew Hodgson action on Sunday night in the Haliburton men's hockey league. The six-team league is now in full swing.

Leader leaves his team in limbo

by CHIP TRUEMAN

MHL reporter

HHEY FOLKS, WE'RE BACK! At 6:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, Vasey Insurance and Curry Motors faced off to begin the 1990-91 M.H.L. season. Former Premier David Peterson was scheduled to drop the "ceremonial first puck", but was unable to attend due to "personal problems". Rob Abbs dropped it instead. The Motormen struck early and maintained the edge. Vasey's tied the game several times, but lacked the ability to take the lead. Curry Motors won the opener 7-6. Helping the team to victory were Chris Hodgson, with three, Andy Hodgson, with a pair, Ken Riley and Al Finni with one a piece. Brokers offence came from Bernie Upton with his toque trick, as well as singles from Drew Carey, Kevin Phillips and John Little.

PeeWees trounce visitors three times

The Haliburton Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees began their season in great form as they trounced their visitors from Richmond Hill 6-3, 6-2 and 7-1 over the weekend.

Goal scorers included Curtis Bain, John Hebert, Mike Hartwick, Bill Koz, Mark Hughes, Tim Keefer and Derek Glendinning. Jackie Morrison, Josh Schell and Jim O'Neil did an excellent job of killing penalties while Curtis Reynolds, Matt Galbraith and Tim Stouffer anchored the defence. Jamie Cowan and Brock Glendinning provided sound goaltending.

The boys will be hosting the Pickering "AA" Panthers this Saturday at 11:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Come out and cheer the boys on!

Roberts-Austin Fuels started their season off on the right skate as they pounded Elstone Motors 12-5. The gasmen's strong offence was no match for a bewildered and dejected motormen squad. Luke Schell, the captain and star player for Elstone Motors, did not show up for the game. This left the team disorganized and demoralized. It was obvious that Roberts-Austin could sense this, and used it to their advantage. M.H.L. newcomer Erin Nicholls made his presence known as he netted four and assisted on four of R-A's 12 goals. Bob Woodcock, Paul Howe, Rod Sisson, Wade MacInnes and "hat tricker" Jim Burk scored the rest. For Elstone Motors it was Scott Rae, Dan Curry, Floyd Henry

Hunters, landowners cautioned

From the MNR

Another fall has arrived and with it, the upcoming hunting season. Every fall the local Ministry of Natural Resources and O.P.P. offices receive many complaints from land owners about hunters trespassing on their lands. The actions of a few irresponsible individuals can affect the public's perception of all hunters.

Hunters caught trespassing can face charges under either the Trespass to Property Act or the Game and Fish Act. Penalties can range up to a $1,000. fine while those charged under the Game and Fish Act could be fined up to $25,000. and face hunting licence suspensions.

Hunters and landowners should both be aware of areas where entry is prohibited even if no signs are present, these include:

- a garden, field or other land under cultivation including: a lawn, an orchard, or a vineyard
- premises on which trees have been planted and have not obtained an average height of more than 2 metres
- woodlots used primarily for agricultural purposes
- enclosed in a manner that indicates the landowners intention to keep persons off the premises or to keep animals on the premises.

Landowners wishing to post their properties have two options. They may use signs indicating that entry is prohibited such as "No Trespassing", "No Entry" or "Keep Out". If a landowner only wishes to keep out certain groups, signs stating "No Hunting" or "No Hunting without permission" would be sufficient. The Trespass to Property Act also allows landowners to use symbols or colour markings rather than signs. Red markings mean all entry is prohibited. Yellow markings indicate that entry is prohibited except for certain activities, and a person who wishes to enter must find out either from the signs or the landowner what activities are permitted.

The markings must be large enough for a circle 10 centimeters (4") in diameter to fit within.

Where signs or colour markings are used they must be posted so that they are clearly visible in the daylight under normal conditions from the approach to every ordinary point of access to the property.

An ethical hunter . . . asks permission to hunt on private property:

- Learn where you can hunt, how often and if you can bring companions.
- Hunt only in designated areas and observe safety zones.
- Demonstrate that you are a responsible and ethical hunter by obeying firearm safety rules, game laws and the regulations.
- Care for the land, stock, crops and buildings as if they were your own.

The Ministry of Natural Resources requires your help in collecting information on moose and deer populations in the Minden District. A crest will be given out for all moose and deer jaws submitted to the Ministry of Natural Resources Office.

You will receive a blaze orange hunting cap in exchange for a suitably prepared deer or moose hide. In Minden District hides should be taken to the Minden Live Bait and Tackle Shop located behind the Minden Auction Barn at the intersection of Highways 35 and 121.

Smashing up this car is all in a weekend's enjoyment

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Having someone crash into your car may be one of the worst things that can happen to you, but for Dave McKay of Haliburton, it's all in a day's work — or play.

On Thanksgiving Day, McKay will slide behind the wheel of "Slimer", his florescent green sedan, and compete against the top 30 demolition drivers in Ontario at the All Ontario Championship in Simcoe.

"I really lucked out this year," says McKay, who has made demolition driving his hobby for the last four years. He came in second at the Kinmount Derby this summer, and just like a plot twist that only could be devised by the best Hollywood screenwriter, was asked to take part in the Simcoe derby when the first place winner backed out.

The first place prize at Simcoe is $10,000, but winning the grand prize is only secondary for McKay, who is looking forward to the chance of driving against demolition derby veterans. "I learn more year after year," he says.

"Slimer", named after everybody's favourite Ghostbuster, who is also pictured on the sedan's trunk, took McKay and his three man crew, Jack Pripp, Wade Woodward of Minden, and Kirk MacDuff of Gooderham, 50 hours and $800 to fix up.

All that, just to crash her up? Come this weekend, "Slimer" will be limping off the field like a bruised and battled fighter. McKay just hopes he'll be able to hop out and boast "You should see the other guy."

Score belies a close game

and Steve Cooper.

You wouldn't know it from the score, but the nightcap between Emmerson Lumber and Haliburton Lumber was actually a close game. Haliburton Lumber got on the board first, but the lead swapped back and forth most of the night. In the fading minutes of the third period, Emmerson Lumber struck for four unanswered goals and took the game by a 10-5 count. What shocked me about this game however, was not the score, but the team line ups. Tony Scheffee and Roy Boughner playing for Emmerson Lumber??? Could it be that this "dynamic duo" are jumping ship??? Well, perhaps not. Neither one of them scored a goal so they must still be party faithfuls. No need to worry here Jim! Goalscorers for Emmerson included Rob Abbs, Brian Mulholland, Rick Ruttig, Roy Scott, Pete Johnson and the veteran Rick Wood with three. Gee, how do you do it Rick? You must be the oldest player on the team! H.L. points came from Ron Yake, Barry Boice, Billy Whittaker and Greg Carpenter.

Getting back to David Peterson for a minute, I couldn't help but wonder how U.I.C. will process his claim. I mean, did the guy quit or was he laid off? Anyway, I hope you survive the waiting period Dave . . . Those hotdogs are expensive!

Next week of course is Thanksgiving. That being a "family day" there are no scheduled games next Sunday. We'll see you in two. I'm Chip and that was . . . THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

POINTS OF VIEW

Camping can always bring a family closer together

Well, before the year was over they had bought themselves a classy hardtop tent trailer — which led to a new minivan to tow it. And this summer Janet and the kids camped out for the entire school vacation period — with Marty joining them for his vacation weeks.

I thought it would be fun if she did a followup column, now that she's camping again with her own family, but I didn't have time to write things like that right after we got back on the job in the fall when we were raising our kids — and she didn't either!

child, my family couldn't always meet our clothing, household, and entertainment needs within this county's borders — I remember many shopping excursions to larger centres. Today, this county provides everything my family might need or want — even to live theatre and live lobster, and I salute the owners of small businesses who took the initiative to expand our county's resources.

Certainly, there are differences of opinion as to the direction of development, but I am confident that we can work together to keep Haliburton County a place where we are proud to live!

I believe that Mr. Giuliano owes a big apology to the men and women who volunteer their time to serve on the Chamber Board. They are not bent on "stealing hard-earned vacation money" in order to make themselves "millionaires". They are men and women who are providing commodities and/or services in order to live in this county. They deserve our thanks, not our condemnation!

Dianne Hagerman,
Haliburton, Ont.

Welcome riders

To the Editor:

Being born and raised in, and proud of Haliburton County, now living in Victoria County, still receiving the Haliburton County Echo, weekly: I was appalled to read, the article, "No Ride in Haliburton" to discover eleven couples would oppose Ride for Sight.

I find it hard to believe a few residents could not tolerate only ONE NIGHT of "party" by fundraisers who take time out of their lives to raise money to help others less fortunate, for eye disease research.

Something to consider: Not only are you depriving your village of the anticipated revenue next June, but in following years. Eight thousand motorcyclists means eight thousand families — Why would they ever want to vacation in Haliburton, "The Heart of the Highlands."

Grin and bear it, put up with noise for one night and be satisfied knowing you didn't stand in the way of a worthy charity.

Hooray Councillor Brian Watts, Boo to the rest of you.

Cory Pearson,
Bobcaygeon.

She did have a good time though, and got a kick out of taking her family back to Ipperwash Provincial Park on Lake Huron, where she spent so many of her childhood summers. I think her biggest kick was when her son Matthew declared that, of all the ones they stayed in, it was his 'favorite' park, too.

We still like camping and traveling, too. I fitted out our pick-up for a trip to Texas right after the snowmobile season the first year we moved up here permanently, and made a somewhat more elaborate camper out of our van for subsequent trips.

Three years ago, I pulled tendons in my right shoulder and arm that kept me from snowmobiling, so we took a longer trip South — and kind of got to like it. So much so, in fact, that we sprung for the mini-motorhome we took away for three months last year.

Because it soon became evident that, no matter how much better my arm gets, the throttle action for a skidoo is one thing that strains it. Another that would be guaranteed to do me in would be trying to pull one out of a snowbank or back up onto a trail...

Last March, we came back from three months in Florida and Georgia just before our 40th wedding anniversary, and we decided at that time, that our present to each other would be a longer trip this winter. We're taking off in a couple of weeks, and at the moment, the plan is to start by visiting some relatives in Oregon.

While The Echo likes to keep things local, Len has agreed that we can mix in a little personal travelogue with the regular column topics over the next few months, and we will.

It may be a little less local in content, as I don't expect to get any back Echos for two or three months, and based on last year, there won't be much of a political nature, because we'll be rather insulated from such events. We only saw a couple of Canadian political items in the U.S. newspapers in three whole months.

Maybe that's what a vacation is all about...

DOWN OUR ROAD

trailer and brought it over to their place. Then they unloaded the same wood and piled it up against the side of the house. This activity warmed them both and there was a real feeling of accomplishment when they looked at the neat lines of stacked wood. "That should do us for a while," she remarked, stepping back and taking another look. "Let's go inside and have a coffee."

By the time the coffee was ready, wonder of wonders but if the sun didn't come out. Suddenly the world was transformed to a blaze of glory. They decided to take their mugs down by the lake where they could sit out of the wind. A fiery maple served as a good backrest and they gazed out over the water which had now turned a beautiful cobalt blue. "Look — two loons," he pointed out as the majestic birds popped up from the watery depths almost in front of them.

"If only the whole season could be like this minute, I'd be happy to give up the other three," she mused, sipping her coffee as the loons slowly made their way past them. In a flash the birds had disappeared again and they waited to see where they'd come up. "Next weekend is Thanksgiving, remember. I wonder how many will be coming for dinner."

"You know it'll be the same as every year," he reminded her. "We never know until the last minute and who ever does show up will have a feast. You're making your famous pumpkin pie, aren't you?"

"Of course. It wouldn't be Thanksgiving without that." They sat in silence for a few minutes, each lost in their own thoughts. Then they started remembering out loud the Thanksgivings of the past. She recalled her first one after moving up from the city, when she was still getting the hang of a wood stove. The green wood didn't help matters and the turkey she prepared ended up over-cooked. But the little house had been full to bursting, the kitchen table with all its leaves extending midway into the living room and everyone tripping over the dogs and cat and having a great time.

Then he remembered the year his mother's stove died just as she had placed the turkey in it to begin cooking. So the poor woman spent the whole day running back and forth between their cottage and the neighbour's, who thankfully hadn't come up that weekend.

There were Thanksgivings when the frost had been so thick on the ground in the morning it looked like a dusting of snow and other years they took pictures of the family sitting out on the deck in shirt sleeves. Sometimes the trees were at their peak of colour, making the earth like another world in another solar system where trees, grasses and shrubs grew in a kaleidoscope of brilliance. Then they had those disappointing years when hardly a leaf remained on the branches and the bare limbs stood cold and harsh in the almost-winter air.

He told her of the year they went water skiing at Thanksgiving. "In all these years it's only happened once, mind you," he pointed out. "But I'll never forget it."

"I guess not," she stated, shivering at the thought. The loons had moved farther away by now, bobbing under the lake's surface and then back up as they made their way out towards the centre of the bay. Then overhead came a sound not heard for a year. Looking up they saw the V formation as a large flock of geese headed south. Their majestic presence dominated the minute as they made their purposeful way. A cloud passed over the sun and once again they pulled up their collars.

Standing up, the empty coffee mugs dangling in their hands, the two of them took one last look for the loons but they had disappeared from sight. Soon they would join the geese in their yearly migration. It was supposed to be a cold winter this year, coming early and lasting a long time. All the signs were there and she sighed at the thought of ice, snow and a messy pile of wood by the fireplace.

As though reading her mind, he started jerking his thumb, imitating the movement of gunning the throttle on a snowmobile. She couldn't help but smile. "We have that to look forward to, right?" he asked with a devilish grin. She agreed. And there were all the other good things, like Christmas and skiing. Maybe they'd even get time to go ice fishing. The sun reappeared as they entered the house and left their mugs on the counter.

He had a job to price and wouldn't be back for at least an hour so she decided to go into town and get everything she needed for Thanksgiving dinner. It would be a beautiful drive with the sun on the colours. She was thankful for all these little pleasures of life in Haliburton.

Magazines aimed at environment

NORTHERN LIGHTS
VIRGINIA MUENZEL

magazine also contains a basic blueprint for setting up recycling programs in schools, businesses, and apartments. There are several other interesting articles. A two-year subscription is $42. If you think that's too much money, give up buying five or ten over-packaged, fast-food products for a couple of months and I'll bet you'll have enough money set aside to buy a subscription for yourself and a second one as a gift for someone else.

There's one new garbage maker on the market that all the kindergarten kids and their mommies have obviously seen on TV. I'm speaking of the Kraft Lunchables. Talk about your over-packaged, over-priced gimmicks! How about a litterless lunch instead? There's even a very simple pattern for a cloth lunch bag.

Ralph Harte from S.S.F.C. Lindsay campus informed Ed that they are now collecting (believe it or not) tetra-boxes for recycling. Now, that is not to say you should start using them again. I don't understand how they can be doing this, but we're going to find out.

Want to make a compost? If you go to the grocery store managers and ask them nicely, they might save you some of those neat pallets that regularly come to the stores. And then remember to pick them up. Actually, there's probably dozens of uses for them. If nothing else, they'd be good kindling. Otherwise they go to the dump.

And, speaking of dumps... Have you been to the Haliburton dump recently? The Municipality of Dysart did something very right when they hired Sam Charlton to organize that landfill site. Personally, I think the new county waste management group ought to use this site as a role model and send all the other landfill managers out to study Sam's methods.

A bouquet of roses goes to Birch Point Lodge. Last spring, the owners ordered a hundred china mugs to replace the styrofoam cups they had been using for their evening 'tea time'. Half-way through the summer, Dennis told me he was already ahead of the game financially. Besides tea looks and tastes much nicer in a china mug.

Finally, one of the best environmental organizations, W.H.E.N., or Worldwide Home Environmentalists Network is based in Vancouver, B.C. It was started by a group of concerned women, who simply began using coffee-flatch time to discuss all the ways each of them could clean up their own act, and then teach others to do the same. One of their on-going projects is to do coffee-clatch type seminars for interested groups. If anyone is interested in this format, please get in touch with me, or anyone else that you know who is involved with C.H.A.N.G.E.

Trent-Severn report

At 50.8 percent on September 17, the Haliburton Reservoir Lakes contained about 2 percent less than the average of the 1970s. In 1987 the lowest recent year by this date, the lakes were already down to 35.2 percent.

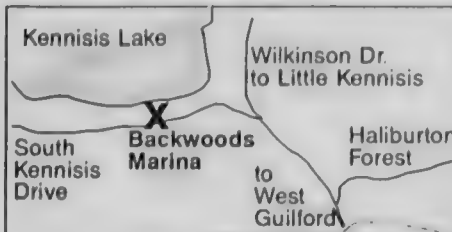

Minimum flows have been run most places from the Haliburton Lakes this week (ending September 22). No real need for the extra water has occurred recently due to the cooler, wetter conditions prevailing. Two lakes will be dropping more quickly than the others, of course, because of their known shallow spawning areas. Kushog Lake and Big Bob Lake are lowered early each autumn to avoid lowering them after the fall spawning of their Lake Trout population.

SECTION 2

'My concern with clear cutting is we're changing the forest,' says naturalist R.D. Lawrence, at left. 'You are destroying that which came before. Selective cutting is the only way.'

'We are users of wood,' says forester Peter Hynard, at right. 'If you're trying to give a competitive edge to one species, you have to give it conditions that favour it above its competitors.'

Two views on clear-cutting

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IN THEORY, the two men's views are not very far apart. Nature is a force to be respected; you can't control it, or do as good a job as she does, so man must learn how to accept her gifts while honouring the limits to her graciously-given bounty.

In application, however, the two men beg to differ (it's not yet determined whether they agree to disagree.)

As the person partly responsible for the Minden District of the Ministry of Natural Resources' clear-cutting policies, Peter Hynard is definitely at odds with naturalist and author R.D. Lawrence who feels clear cutting is intolerable. But as their conversation unfolds — in the comfort of two cushioned chairs in the Lawrences' living room — it's their similarity of views which is most striking.

The two men had never met before and the social pleasantries take on a rather scientific bent. After testing Mr. Hynard's knowledge in a discussion about the surrounding forest and topography, Mr. Lawrence launches his opening salvo.

"My concern with clear cutting is we're changing the forest," says Mr. Lawrence whose definition of forest includes much more than trees. By cutting down every tree as opposed to selectively choosing ones to feed the lumber industry, "you're destroying habitat, moving animals out of a habitat, and soil organisms are changed."

"When you plant, you're planting trees, not creating a forest. Let's call 'reforestation' what it is."

Using clear-cutting as a forestry tool will only last so long, says Mr. Lawrence, just as you can't plant corn year after year on the same soil. When you cut down all the trees, you're baring the soil, creating opportunities for soil erosion. No canopy of leaves is left for those trees which are intolerant of direct sunlight, thereby killing off most of the planted seedlings.

"Selective cutting is the only way."

"I'm not an advocate of large-scale clear-cutting in Haliburton County," Mr. Hynard begins his rebuttal. "When it comes to harvesting forests and the provision of habitats, we are users of wood. Our houses are wood, The Echo is made out of wood, your books are printed by using wood."

"It's not a question of whether we'll be cutting down trees but how we will be cutting them and how we replace them."

Certain trees are more "valuable" than others in the forest-product industry, but more than marketability is considered when forests are cut and harvested, Mr. Hynard says. (From this point on, you learn Mr. Hynard could have a second career as a teacher.)

Different trees require different growing conditions. Remember the lonely white pine growing out of some barren, rocky crag in a Group of Seven painting? White pines thrive under the most adverse conditions — once given the opportunity. In its first forest floor all to themselves. Once they've been established, other types of trees will start to grow.

Fires are good for other trees as well. The jack pine produces a seed that needs 130 degree Fahrenheit heat to open it. "Only one thing will do that — a forest fire."

When nature has a forest fire, she does it with gusto. Thousands of acres can be destroyed, making regeneration of some species impossible for a long, long time. Nature can get away with that, the MNR can't. Referring to a clear-cut and burn near Salerno Lake, Mr. Hynard says "we didn't want to burn all of Cavendish Township."

There's no such thing as a monoculture, Mr. Hynard defends against one of Mr. Lawrence's criticisms, because nature won't allow it.

"You can't beat nature, you can only live with it and it makes sense to do that," Mr. Hynard says. Mr. Lawrence nods in agreement — to this state-

"No doubt about it," says Mr. Hynard, with the faith of the converted.

Why would the MNR want poplar, asks Mr. Lawrence, who first worked in the bush when he arrived in Canada from Europe. Poplar has always been considered a junk tree to foresters.

Pulp and paper companies are mixing in more poplar because it makes newsprint less opaque, Mr. Hynard replies. If there's a market, the MNR will plant the species being demanded.

Besides, Mr. Hynard says, "I wouldn't want to suggest you always grow the most valuable species."

"You've created a managed forest, but I can't see the advantage of that," says Mr. Lawrence. He then cites a booklet given to him by the MNR to help him on his own land, Woodlot Management: Material to accompany the forests or the trees.

As part of forest management at the Ministry of Natural Resources, clear-cutting is condoned. Ontario is one of the last provinces to continue with the controversial practice year, a white pine may only grow one inch, and one inch the next year. Then it will sprout up quickly but in those first two years, saplings can easily be pushed aside by more dominant trees.

"If you're trying to give a competitive edge to one species, you have to give it conditions that favour it above its competitors," says Mr. Hynard. Hostile soils, therefore, give some trees the edge. (Sometimes herbicides are used but Mr. Hynard says "we use less herbicide in a year than goes onto the lawns of Minden and Haliburton.")

White pines do best in the parched, dry soil which is created when the previous forest has been clear-cut and all the leftovers burned. Other fast-growing trees, such as poplar, don't like it. So for the first few years after a clear-cut, white pines have the ment at least.

And if Mr. Lawrence is worried about maintaining biodiversity, Mr. Hynard says that without the MNR's intervention, the only trees in the county would be sugar maple and balsam fir.

"You're not going to have diversity with only two species," says the forester, adding that song birds would therefore not be present either. "If you want biodiversity, you have to practice a diversity of cutting practices."

The MNR welcomes a mix of trees. At Salerno Lake, the poplar should be harvestable in 10 years.

"When you replant white pine, when do you expect to harvest it," Mr. Lawrence asked.

"In 120 years."

"Hopefully," Mr. Lawrence says sardonically.

In it, the writers from the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education say "The resultant destruction of surface vegetation from clear-cutting has far-reaching consequences, including erosion by wind and water, which is increased when heavy equipment destroys the humus layer; slow regrowth of trees because new saplings are not protected by a covering of mature trees; removal of seed trees of desired species, permitting only less desirable trees to regenerate the area through natural seeding."

"In addition, the trees left because they are too small or of a low value species are subject to wind-throw... Now most counties in Ontario have passed a by-law under the Trees Act prohibiting clear-cutting."

Clear-cutting is one method; Lawrence prefers selective cut

You have to look at each site and its management practices individually, Mr. Hynard says. White pines thrive in soil seemingly decimated by bulldozers; maples would never tolerate such intrusive methods. Therefore, when planting maples, you would never use heavy equipment. As well, "if you have a soil that is vulnerable to water erosion, then clear-cutting with heavy site preparation is the wrong thing to do."

"I'm not taking aim at the Haliburton MNR," Mr. Lawrence says. "As a biologist and conservationist, I'm concerned about what we're doing as a whole, not only in Ontario, but across Canada. What you have said thus far I agree with in part, but," casting a mischievous glance, "you've left out a lot."

"When you clear cut an area, you are destroying that which existed before. You might be able to get something out of it," but you will never be able to fully replace the previous ecosystem.

"My concern is not so much the uses as abuses... The acceleration of abuse of our systems has travelled at a frightening pace. If we don't stop and take a look at ourselves, we're going to be in trouble."

Two months ago, the author pointed out, the United Nations issued a report on the countries leading the way in forest devastation. The worst offenders? Brazil and Canada.

"No one should start clear cutting in Glamorgan and continue to Dorset without looking at other conditions, absolutely not," Mr. Hynard says, not wanting to comment on other jurisdiction's forestry methods. As well, he recognizes "these clear cuts would be very unpopular if done in areas of high value for recreational use or right next to their cottage."

As to Mr. Lawrence's criticism that there is no interaction or communication with the MNR's various branches — foresters realizing beavers help create forests, wildlife managers trying to trap them — or with the Ministry of the Environment, Mr. Hynard says that's simply not true.

"It's not difficult to get together with (the people in the MOE)," he says. Having two ministries while Mr. Lawrence advocates only one, "might create bureaucracy which may be difficult for people but it's not harming forestry practices."

Only twice in his 17 years have the bureaucrats gone against the wishes of the local office, Mr. Hynard says.

By the end of the two-hour conversation, each man may not have won a whole-hearted endorsement of their beliefs. But the doors to communication, co-operation and understanding have been opened.

As Mr. Hynard walks to his truck, he invites Mr. Lawrence to accompany him into the forest one day, to help tree-marking crews pick which trees should be harvested.

Mr. Lawrence replies in kind, giving Mr. Hynard a copy of his book, A Natural History of Canada. Foresters need to know about biology, he quips.

Rest assured, the two men will meet — and argue — again.

Peter Hynard and R.D. Lawrence are really on the same side of the fence when it comes to their views about respecting nature.

PEOPLE

Times may change, but not a love of the cottage life

Editor's note: When the summer reporters went back to school a few weeks ago, they took with them notes from interviews which still had to be written into stories. The following is one of those stories.

by MICHAEL McHUGH

COMING UP TO HALIBURTON LAKE year after year meant, in a way, going back in time for Evelyn Cryderman. With no electricity and telephones, and only a canoe for transportation, Haliburton was quite a change from Ingersoll, near London, Ont.

"It was like being back in the 1800s," she said from her windy cottage on point on Haliburton Lake. And as the winds went by and the cities became more modern, progress was slow to hit this region. Summer vacations were times of hardship because for 10 months of the year back home, household chores were "easier."

"It's not like you didn't have it all winter," she said, referring to hydro and telephones and washing machines.

Mrs. Cryderman first came to Haliburton in 1930 where she worked for three years at the Continuation School. Her husband-to-be, Johnson Roberts, J.R., taught at the public school.

"That's where the romance began," she said with a twinkle in her smile.

Their first cabin was built a few feet back from where the more modern one now stands. With no roads, her husband and Roy Brohm had to transport everything they needed in by canoe. Given the length restrictions of the canoe, the original cabin was built with short, little boards the two men picked up around the lake. And sample wallpaper books provided the initial insulation.

One thing about the construction of their first second home remains a mystery to Mrs. Cryderman. On the front of the cabin hung a massive door, which is currently in the Haliburton Museum. But how did the men transport it by canoe from Oblong Lake, where Mrs. Cryderman figures it came from, to their site on Haliburton Lake?

"I don't know how they got it up here," she says, still baffled by the feat.

The land was originally owned by the Canada Land and Emigration Company. But since J.R. was a "squatter," he had first rights to buy the land. Which he did.

The two were married in 1939, and since then have had two houses, one here, and one in Ingersoll.

"We both liked hunting and fishing," she said, and every evening the two would meet other lake residents at the middle of Haliburton Lake for their nightly exchanges of conversation, and fishing.

A common meeting spot for people back then was a resort owned by Larry and Elma Barjarow called Kia-Ora, which means good luck in New Zealand. Here, the group would enjoy good home-baked goods. Electricity or not, Mrs. Cryderman admitted baking was never one of her strong points.

The name for their resort of pleasure, however, had unhappy origins. During the Second World War, Larry was housed in a prison camp with a New Zealander who passed the word on to him. And their time together was embodied in the name of the Bar-

Dart's store a meeting place

jarow's summer retreat.

When telephones finally arrived to the region, there was only one to service the immediate area, and it was located at the local store in Fort Irwin owned by Russell Dart.

"The women in the area would line up on Thursdays to tell their husbands what to bring up to the cottage," Mrs. Cryderman recalled. Dart would also post phone messages on a bulletin board outside his store. With the store being a central place for the village, you were sure never to miss a message.

Mrs. Cryderman recalled the many friends she had at both her homes, but especially here in Haliburton.

And true to other summer communities, no matter who moved during the year, they always kept their cottages.

"I know more people up here, and knew them longer," she says comparing here to Ingersoll. "People move in and out but keep their cottages."

"You didn't just sell them off," she said. To back that up, Mrs. Cryderman said that her grandchildren are now deciding which months they will spend up at the cottage, although those times are still years away.

As the community aged, their forms of recreation changed too. Gone was hunting and fishing, with bridge and euchre eagerly taking its place.

"Three times a week we could get two tables of bridge," she added, noting that now they are not even able to get one game going.

Another meeting place for the local cottagers was the church. From 1953 to 1989, the local congregation met for Sunday services, where the multitude of ministers in the area would take turns giving the service.

"I felt very badly when it was discontinued," she said, stressing she missed the organ music played by Mrs. Eleanor Sovereign.

But the end of every summer means closing up the cottage for another year. And it is getting increasingly difficult for Mrs. Cryderman to do it on her own.

"As a widow, you couldn't keep it yourself," she said, adding that her husband has been gone for over 20 years. Luckily, her daughter, Margaret Mitchell, spends blocks of time up at the cottage and can help her mother do the necessary winterizing before they leave for the five hour trip back down to Ingersoll.

Spring will arrive quickly enough, and Mrs. Cryderman will make the trip back up to Haliburton Lake again, to breathe in the fresh air, and stay in touch with times gone by.

TERRI CARSON'S
PRALINE PUMPKIN PIE

A bit unusual, yes, but the crunchy praline that tops this traditional pumpkin pie has made this dessert an all time favourite with Terri and her family of six.

PASTRY

TENDERFLAKE Perfect Pastry dough for double-crust 9" (23 cm) pie (see TENDERFLAKE large package).

FILLING

|           |                                |        |
|-----------|--------------------------------|--------|
| 2         | eggs                           | 2      |
| 1 cup     | lightly-packed brown sugar     | 250 mL |
| 1/2 tsp   | salt                           | 2 mL   |
| 1 tsp     | cinnamon                       | 5 mL   |
| 1/4 tsp   | nutmeg                         | 1 mL   |
| 1-3/4 cup | YORK Canned Pumpkin            | 400 mL |
| 1 cup     | evaporated milk or light cream | 250 mL |

TOPPING

|         |                                |        |
|---------|--------------------------------|--------|
| 1/3 cup | granulated sugar               | 75 mL  |
| 1/3 cup | lightly-packed brown sugar     | 75 mL  |
| 3 tbsp  | evaporated milk or light cream | 45 mL  |
| 1/2 cup | pecan halves                   | 125 mL |
|         | NUTRIWHIP, whipped (optional)  |        |

Roll out half of dough and fit into 9" (23 cm) pie plate. Trim edge even with pie plate. Roll out remaining pastry. Cut out small leaf, heart or circle shapes of dough using small cutter or sharp knife. Place shapes around dampened pie crust edge and press lightly to secure.

Beat all filling ingredients. Pour into pie shell. Bake on lower oven rack in a pre-heated 450°F (230°C) oven for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 350°F (180°C) for 25-30 minutes or until set. (Insert knife in centre; if it comes out clean, the pie is done.)

Mix together topping ingredients. Sprinkle evenly over pie. Cover pastry edge with foil. Broil 5" (12 cm) from heat until topping is bubbly and browned. Serve warm or cooled with Nutriwhip topping.

Children's series an eclectic mix of talent

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY Children's Concert Series has announced its 1990/91 program, with series tickets available beginning this week. Once again, an outstanding lineup of performers is on hand, with even more diversity of content than in previous years. The audience age range of this year's concerts will include most children under the age of twelve.

The series opens on Saturday, November 17th at 2:00 p.m. with one of Canada's best children's artists, Charlotte Diamond. Ms. Diamond has played concerts all across Canada as well as the United States and has received universal acclaim from kids and parents alike. Her recordings have received a Juno Award and many nominations, and they will be available at the concert.

On February 10th, 1991, the Concert Series breaks new ground with a presentation of The Magic Flute by the Ontario Ballet Theatre. This delightful company has been introducing children to the world of dance and ballet since 1980. Original choreography and music, beautiful costumes, and a lively story make Ontario Ballet Theatre a very special event for the children of Haliburton County.

The final concert is on April 21, 1991, with Kaleidoscope Story Theatre presenting a production that seems to include everything: mime, music, song, dance, and story-telling. Versatility and fun are the hallmarks of Kaleidoscope.

All concerts are at 2:00 p.m. in the gymnasium of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, Haliburton. Please note that the first concert, November 17th, is on a Saturday, both other dates are Sundays. Tickets for the series are available for $40. for all three concerts. This is a family subscription, whether you have one child, or six, or more. This price will rise to $45. dollars on November 1, 1990, so parents are advised to subscribe early. Previous subscribers will be contacted, but anyone wishing to purchase a series ticket can do so at CHACE Place Haliburton, CHACE Minden, Bins And Baskets in Haliburton, or call Barrie Wood at 754-4227 or Gayle Arup at 457-3782.

The Haliburton County Children's Concert Series is partly funded by the Ontario Arts Council, with the balance coming from ticket sales. By expanding their range of appeal this year, Series organizers are gearing for a larger than ever audience.

World Vegetarian Day a chance to spread word about advantages

by HELEN JAMES

IN 1977, a relatively small celebration inaugurated World Vegetarian Day. Now, in 1990, October 1 is recognized globally, and with it has come a much greater awareness of all facets of the vegetarian movement.

Yes, vegetarians have many good reasons for celebrating this day. They run a much lower risk of developing chronic diseases such as cirrhosis of the liver; cancer of the colon, breast, or prostate; coronary diseases such as heart attacks and hardening of the arteries; high blood pressure; high cholesterol levels; diabetes mellitus; obesity; arthritis; osteoporosis.

In this time of high energy costs and shortages, it is a fact that cultivating plants for direct human consumption uses far less of our non-renewable energy resources (coal, oil, gas) than does meat production.

Vegetarians rejoice in the fact that they are helping to reduce world hunger. Behind the sad fact that in a world where 2/3 of the population is underfed, it is a hard fact that it takes 16 pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat. It has been estimated that if Americans were to reduce their meat consumption by only 10 percent, it would free over 12 million tons of grain annually, which could then feed 60 million humans for a year!

Best of all, on October 1, vegetarians celebrate the fact that their way of life brings inner peace and contentment. They know that their actions are helping to create a society of love, where man's tyranny over animals comes to an end, when all life is respected!

Think about all these things on October 1, and every day thereafter.

Think, then act!

Helen James of Cardiff is the Secretary of the Haliburton-North Hastings Vegetarian Association.

HI! I'M Teresa Scheffee, and I am a student at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School. During this year, I will serve as the President of Student Council.

The other members of Student Council are: Chris Dobbins Secretary; and class representatives Jodie Mueller, Derek Glendinning, Brock Glendinning, Curtis Reynolds, Jaime Ogle, Rachel Levis, Amanda Morrison and Valerie Patterson.

All of us, as well as our staff supervisor Mr. Hoare, will be very busy this year, planning activities and making the school a fun place to be!

All of the Blue Jay fans out there were happy to hear that the Student Council had a Blue Jay Spirit Day — everyone wore blue and white. And on Friday, everyone wore a Blue Jay hat. The class with the most people wearing hats and blue and white received a free case of pop.

There is also going to be a poem contest at our school. The topic is the Toronto Blue Jays. As you can see we are great fans of theirs. The prize for the winning poem will be small pizza delivered to the winner's classroom.

These are just a few of the activities we have planned. I will be reporting every now and then to keep you informed of all the latest Hodgson happenings.

Family ties, history's tales

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

WHEN WE HEAR the word "history", almost automatically we think of the many afternoons spent in a classroom. Nations are forged out of the aftermath of battle, creating enduring myths and heroes. All the while, time slowly creeps towards the present.

Unfortunately, what we often failed to realize is that history is not strictly reserved for individual countries and ancient civilizations. For Cec Rowe of Minden, the most interesting history of all can be found within the confines of our own families.

"Once you start looking at your own family, it's hard to stop," he says. "It's very addictive."

From tracing his own family's origins, Rowe's interest has led him to form the Haliburton Highlands Genealogy Group, of which he is chairman. The group was incorporated informally this past summer to record, in conjunction with the Ontario Genealogical Society (OGS), the information carved on headstones. Although the words are few, the names, dates of birth and death, can tell a fascinating story of the province's past.

The OGS is working as quickly as possible because many of the older headstones are in danger of being lost forever. The onslaught of urban development, vandalism, and acid rain are causing many of the stones to disappear or deteriorate.

Once all the information has been collected and catalogued, it will be sent to the OGS and the National Archives in Ottawa. This will make people's quest for information about their ancestors easier.

When Rowe heard that the OGS, of which he is member, had set an autumn-1991 deadline to have all Ontario cemeteries recorded, he offered his services. He had no idea just how large a job it was.

"I thought they would ask me to record maybe three or four cemeteries," he laughs. "Then they sent me a printout with 27 cemeteries on it."

Rowe realized he would need help and asked his friend Gerry Rome, also of Minden and treasurer of the Genealogy Group, to lend a hand. Like Rowe, Rome also has had an active interest in genealogy. For the past three years he's been tracing his family's roots.

Rome's fascination began one afternoon when he and his wife sat down to write everything they could think of about their family history. They were very surprised at what they discovered. "We thought we knew everything there was to know about our family," he said, "but when it was down on paper, we found out we really didn't know anything."

That's the first step necessary in tracing your family tree: the desire to know where it is you came from. For Cec Rowe, his first and second step were taken two years ago on a trip to England. He carried with him an old newspaper clipping from 1898 which spoke of his grandfather's exploits during the Canadian goldrush.

While Rowe was in Edinburgh, Scotland, his grandfather's birthplace, he decided on a whim to see if his grandfather's name would come up at the local registry office. The office was closed, so Rowe turned to the local phone book, where he found 26 Rows listed. He took a photocopy of the page from the phone book and on his return to Canada, wrote 26 form letters to everyone on his list.

He received 12 replies, 11 which turned out to be negative, and one reply which came from an amateur genealogist. "It was a coincidence," says Rowe. "The day my letter arrived, he was on his way to the Registry Office, thinking he would take a shot and run my grandfather's name through to see if anything would come up and, bingo, he hit right on."

With his Scottish friend's help, Rowe has now managed to trace his family's roots back to the 1500s. He has discovered that many of his ancestors were members of the clergy, and that his great grandfather was a surgeon. Names, occupations and addresses of many of his ancestors, as well as how many children they had and what became of them, are now recorded.

Haliburton Highlands Genealogy Group helps others research their family's past

However, trying to trace farther back beyond the 1500s has proven to be quite a challenge for Rowe. Since most of the general population a few hundred years ago could not read or write, much of the information had to be passed down by word of mouth, and in many cases family history is lost.

But Rowe has been persistent, and knows he will be able to continue his search.

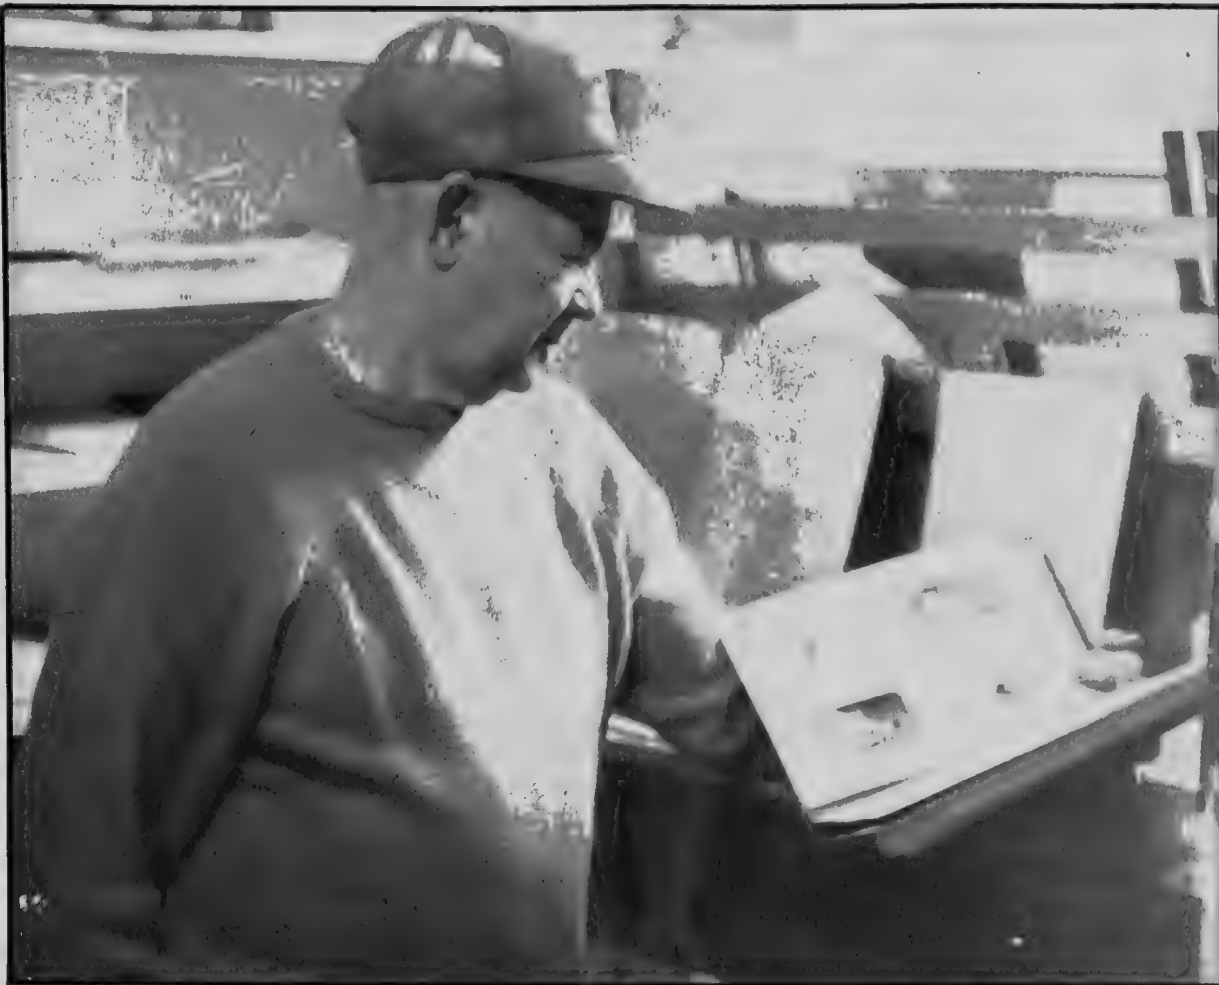

"You have to be very patient," says Gerry Rome, explaining that it takes time to sort through information which may take months to arrive. Retirement makes things easier for Rome. As a bank manager, he never had the time to search. "You don't have time when your young, your too busy trying to raise a family and get established."

However, when information is finally uncovered, Rome says that in most cases it proves to be very "enlightening". "You find out things about your family that may not be true," he says. "Stories do get changed when they are handed from generation to generation."

As an example, he mentions one relative who was supposed to have owned a great deal of land. This, as Rome found out, was untrue. "You have to have an open mind. Never be afraid of what you might find."

A new beginning at the Rails' End

Holly Hutchison is now the curator of Haliburton gallery

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

FATE HAS A FUNNY WAY of sneaking in to people's lives. In talking about the roads which led Holly Hutchison to the Rails' End Gallery, you approach the corners not knowing what you'll find around the bend. Once there, however, the next leg of the journey is greeted with confidence: fate hasn't steered her wrong so far.

When Hutchison graduated from an Etobicoke high school several years ago, she knew she wanted to be involved in the arts. But how? The Universities of Western Ontario and York both accepted her into their Fine Arts programs, but she held off. Instead of studying the history of art, she wanted to be making it.

"The Ontario College of Art offered more venues to do the work yourself," says the new Rails' End curator, sitting on the outdoor walkway on a beautiful autumn day. "With the other courses at the university, I wouldn't have been pursuing art in a practical sense, it was studying what other people had done."

Although her parents aren't overly artistic — they did encourage their daughter's creativity, however — Hutchison had some artistic friends. Their experiences taught her that art can be a career, not something to simply be indulged in as a curious and appreciative spectator. A portfolio was put together, an interview successfully completed, and she enrolled at one of Canada's pre-eminent art schools.

"I went in with the idea I'd come out as an experimental artist in painting," she says, smiling. OCA would not be that complacent, however, in granting her wish. In her four years there, Hutchison took "an eclectic collection of courses" which included nude drawing, music theory and 16th Century English.

By her third year, painting had been pushed out by a fascination with textiles. "From an open-ended exploration in painting, I went to weaving, which is very mathematical and methodical."

Even with its rules, weaving is wide open to experiments with colour, Hutchison's forte. This world was opened up to her even more by teachers William Hodge and Robert Wiley, two men of whom she speaks with great respect.

"They were instrumental in encouraging me to do something with the skills I had. They look at your four years at OCA as a learning experience and period of growth. It doesn't matter if you go out and use your experience in the visual arts. They let me take my time and not panic about what I was going to be."

Another touchstone in her development was the opportunity to work with Dorothy Burnham, who was going to be the keynote speaker at the North American Textile Conference, Convergence '86.

"She gave a lecture on the history of textiles in Canada and accompanied her lecture with a slide presentation," Hutchison remembers of that pivotal summer. Hutchison's job was to gather the 700 to 800 slides and synchronize them into a rhythmic, colourful presentation using three screens.

"It was such a thrill and an honour to meet Dorothy and work with her. She's almost a hero in Canadian research of textiles." Even more thrilling was that over the summer, the two also became friends.

Graduation had to come, however, and with it a decision about what the future may hold.

"I went in knowing what I was going to do when I came out but when I came out I had no idea what I was going to do," she says. Once again, someone had come to the conclusion "The more you learn, the more you realize you don't know."

After a brief spell as an independent professional weaver — "I quickly decided I didn't want to work on my own in a basement like a one-person factory" — Hutchison was talking with her aunt about what she should do next. The aunt is Eunice Heyes of Eagle Lake — her father's sister — and Mrs. Heyes knew there was an opening for a secretarial position at the Rails' End Gallery.

"It was one of those instances of 'Great, I can get into Haliburton and I can get into a gallery' — it was a way into the field."

She didn't know much about the gallery but as she notes, "As a secretary, you know everything that goes on. It was a basic way for me to begin to learn."

That was June of 1987. Three months earlier, Elene Freer had joined the gallery as curator, and the two women forged a strong friendship. A year and a half later, the gallery, owned and administered by the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts, was facing an uncertain economic future so Hutchison accepted a one-year contract as secretary at the high school.

'I went in at OCA knowing what I was going to do when I came out. But when I came out, I had no idea what I was going to do.'

Meanwhile, Hutchison met Stephen Patrick, a writer and broadcast producer. He had decided to leave city life behind and open up a bookstore in Haliburton, Patrick Books. When the high school contract expired, Hutchison worked at the bookstore. In September of 1989, they married. More than one part of the wedding was a dream come true: former teachers Hodge and Wiley wove a brilliant green bolt of cloth, from which they made her wedding gown. With a piece left over and admired by Dorothy Burnham, they made Burnham a shirt; a compliment for Hutchison.

In the spring, Freer accepted the job as curator at a Muskoka art gallery. Hutchison agreed to fill in and since June, has been concentrating on re-learning the ropes. "My main goal was to keep things going."

At the time, Hutchison didn't think she'd be ap-

Heating in the Winter. Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

PEOPLE

Group traces people's past

So then, you have taken the first step and decided that you wish to know more about your family. Where do you go from here? Rome suggests the best place to begin is to talk to the senior members of your family: grandparents, great aunts and uncles. Ask them about their parents and where they came from. "Write everything down, no matter how small or insignificant you may think it is, it could help later on," says Rome.

Once you have a few names and locations, go there and check with local government offices, such as a Registry Office or Municipal Office. From there you may find out exactly where your relatives lived, or when they were married or when they died.

However, this type of searching will only lead you so far. Cec Rowe suggests for further help, write to any one of the many genealogy societies in Canada, and around the world. The OGS is one example, another, and the largest most comprehensive collection of data in North America, is Ancestry Incorporated, which is run by the Mormon Church out of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Once they receive the name you want searched, they will send you a report if they should find something in which your ancestors name appears. Fees vary from society to society. For an ancestry search, it costs around $10 (U.S.), and is slightly cheaper if you are a registered member of their society.

Rowe belongs to nine different organizations throughout England and Canada, and besides just making inquiries, collects as much information as he can to share with his different affiliations. For example, Rowe often collects obituaries from the Toronto Star — the high profile ones usually found in the front section — and every three months, sends them to the archives in England. They in turn may pass the data on to someone else.

"It's like a real network," says Rowe, whose office in the basement of his home is filled with information collected from fellow genealogists all over the world.

Sharing information is perhaps one of the most important reasons for the formation of the Haliburton Genealogy Group, which now has 10 members.

The group came together over the summer, but did not officially incorporate until September 20. "We all had different books about genealogy, and everyone learning from one another," says Rowe.

Once the group finishes recording the tombstone information for the OGS, which so far has data on three-quarters of Ontario cemeteries, Rowe says the group will set up their own Genealogy Reference in the Minden Library, "so anybody can use it to look up information."

But won't it feel strange to trudge through, or rather, over the final resting places of so many people? Not for group secretary June Partridge of Haliburton. "I think it's exciting," she says. "I'm very interested in history and this gives it a personal touch."

Partridge has been tracing her family roots for the last five or six years, going as far back as the 1700s. She said sometimes she feels like a "super sleuth", and that learning about her family has been quite an experience.

"You learn different things, why you do things the way you do, or say things the way you do," she says. "You soon realize the influence your ancestors have had on you."

Gallery has role to play in community

plying for the job as permanent curator. But the challenges and rewards attracted her and she submitted her name to the list of several applicants. Last week, the Guild was pleased to announce Hutchison would be the new curator.

"It doesn't often happen that people do what they want to do and have jobs in life they enjoy," she says, counting herself as one so fortunate. "Anyone who has that is very lucky."

By being part of a viable, dynamic community art gallery, Hutchison's job benefits everyone.

"Along with working at the Rails' End, you live in this community, you're bettering the community for your children. It's important to be a community member and contribute to it if you expect to get anything back," she explains. "It's also important that people in all areas have a visual arts venue. If I can be a part of that, that would be wonderful for me."

With the way galleries work, the next few months' shows have been organized by Freer. While making sure they are successfully presented, Hutchison must also be thinking of the future and what artists she will invite.

"Definitely I'll pursue artists because I enjoy their work or the value within the artwork," she says. At the same time, though, the viewers' own likes and dislikes must also be taken into consideration.

At the same time, however, "Art isn't always pretty, it isn't always something you want to put over the couch in your living room. You'll love some art, you'll hate some art, and some art will make you angry."

Ultimately, allowing people to be exposed to others' ideas through art is Hutchison's main goal.

"One thing that art does is it conveys ideas and perceptions about your community, your province, your country and your personal relationships," she says. Again, you don't always have to like what you're seeing, and the ensuing debate is part of the exhibit's value.

Because she's new to the role of curator, Hutchison can not say for sure what subtle stamp of her own she'll place on the gallery. As she comes to yet another bend in the road, she's just looking forward to discovering what's on the other side.

PEOPLE

A man's home is his pride

Six years after a water skiing accident left him seriously injured, Tony Birrell has finally regained some independence

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

ONE-FORTY-FIVE KINGAN STREET are magical words to Tony Birrell. More than just an address, to him they represent freedom and an incredible feeling of self-worth. After a long, hard struggle, Tony Birrell has found someplace where he can belong.

"I feel terrific," the 44-year-old new homeowner says. "I have my dog, I have great independence." Independence is very important to Tony. After years of living in institutions, he greatly values the thought that he can, to a certain measure, set his own rules. Owning a home has given him back the sense of pride which has been lost since a waterskiing accident in 1984.

Tony is the son of Primrose and Bruce Birrell, who retired to their cottage on Soyers Lake several years ago. It was on the lake that Tony first came in contact of the Anyone Can Waterski association. Members were doing demonstrations of what the blind could achieve on skis.

Already a good downhill and water skier, Tony quickly befriended the organizers. Diagnosed as having retinitis pigmentosa, a degenerative eye disease, when in his twenties, Tony had been able to adapt well to having less than five per cent of his sight. Performing with the group seemed a natural next step.

Skiing is one of the few times blind people can enjoy the exhilaration of speed, his parents say. Always cautious, always mindful of the rules, they were very careful to temper Tony's enthusiasm for the sport with strict safety measures.

A year after ACWA-ski came to Soyers Lake, Tony was asked to take part in a demonstration north of Toronto. He had been planning to visit his parents, but his ride fell through so he agreed. For most of the performance, Tony skied in the wide portion of the lake. Then, without Tony's knowledge, his parents believe, he was taken into the narrow part of the lake.

Tony had never been a daredevil waterskier. He enjoyed it, but he never took risks. So when the boat approached a ski ramp in the narrow part of the lake, it was never Tony's intention to use it.

A picture, taken by a Globe and Mail photographer who was in the boat, shows a frown crossing Tony's face as he realized there was a dark shadow ahead of him. Whatever it was wasn't supposed to be there. A few seconds later, he crashed into the vertical end of the ski ramp.

Only modern technology kept him alive. For weeks he was in a coma, then there were complications and it was some time before doctors felt they had won the fight against death. But Tony didn't come out of the accident unscathed. He is now completely without sight, has permanent brain damage, and injuries make walking difficult.

As his parents began the long and difficult legal procedures to get compensation, Tony languished in the chronic care unit of Peterborough Civic Hospital. A young, energetic man, he was in the same room as elderly, dying gentlemen. The hospital was not equipped and the staff was not trained to deal with a brain-injured, blind man. Those years were a dark hell for Tony, who frequently wanted to kill himself.

It was during this time The Echo wrote a story about Tony, and his parents' ongoing battle with Health and Welfare Canada to get Tony a disability pension. Although governments had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep Tony alive, a technicality prevented him from getting a disability pension. The few hundred dollars a month would have allowed the Birrells to improve Tony's quality of life by hiring companions and therapists.

The people of Haliburton responded by writing letters and sending petitions to then-Health Minister, Jake Epp. It took some time, and a lot of effort, but the ministry was finally convinced to change its mind and grant the pension.

More good news came last July. Tony had spent a month at Chedoke-McMaster Hospital in Hamilton, undergoing tests and assessments to gauge his capabilities. On July 15, a doctor from Chedoke phoned to say Tony was accepted in the program and should be signed in that day. While elated by the news, the Birrells wanted to postpone Tony's arrival by three days. Tony's brother Rodney was getting married in Montreal, and Tony had been fraught with anticipation of being able to attend.

"The doctor was flabbergasted we hesitated but the wedding was very important to Tony," Mrs. Birrell says. On the Monday, the move was made.

There were seven other men and one woman in Tony's group. (Most brain-injured people are men who get into traffic accidents.) Corinne, the woman patient, couldn't speak but she communicated by pointing out letters on a board.

"Instead of feeling separated or far apart, people had a greater feeling of togetherness," Tony said. "When one person spoke, the others in the room knew what they were talking about."

(It should be noted that Tony still has many problems with communication. He confuses times and places, and must be helped with details. For instance, in remembering Corinne's name, his mother reminded him that it began with a C. Other details are remembered through repetition, or remembering what other people have said.)

"The staff really fostered a feeling of family. They were like brothers and sisters," Mrs. Birrell says. Staff held regular meetings to exchange experiences and ideas, and family was also part of team meetings. Although Mrs. Birrell had spent the month of assessment in Hamilton, she and her husband felt confident spending most of their time in Haliburton and going to Hamilton for visits.

Therapy included helping Tony improve memory skills, speech and co-ordination. By the end of the nine months, "his memory was helped, his balance improved tremendously and that terrible anxiety he had was diminished very much," his mother says.

However, Tony's happiness was not complete. "Chedoke is still an institution," Mrs. Birrell says. "Although the atmosphere was understanding, there were still rules." Like most adults, Tony doesn't appreciate always being told what to do.

Unfortunately, after his stay at Chedoke, Tony had to be transferred back to Civic. But his stay would not be for long.

Ever since the accident, the Birrells have been involved in a lawsuit against the Ontario Water Ski Association and the various groups involved in the accident. Last year the suit was settled out of court for an undisclosed sum which was less than the Birrells had been hoping for.

Responsibility for Tony's welfare was then placed in the capable hands of his brother, Sidney, who lives in Peterborough.

"Sidney wanted to get a house or building with rental possibilities so there'd be some income, because without that, the settlement wouldn't provide enough money," Mr. Birrell says. The red-brick, three-storey house on Kingan Street was the ideal purchase.

On May 4, a car pulled up to the sidewalk and Tony stepped out. Walking towards the front door, he was handed a key by Sidney. Inside, 20 to 30 people welcomed Tony to his new home.

Big and rambling, the house is full of people. There's the couple who lives in the back. They have a system set up so that if Tony gets up in the night, a bell in their apartment goes off and they check to see if everything's all right. The front part of the house also has tenants, and the upstairs is being fixed so students can move in.

Then there's Misty, Tony's chocolate brown Labrador and friend. Tony can spend hours in the garden throwing Misty her ball; Misty's also someone he can talk to so he doesn't feel alone.

Indeed, Tony is never really alone. At seven in the morning, Ramona arrives to cook Tony's dishes, set out his clothes, do his laundry and prepare him for the day ahead. At 10:30, she says goodbye to him as he boards the bus for disabled people. This takes him to the Ability Workshop, formerly known as the Lumpy Factory.

Tony's talent is sanding the wooden gift items the Workshop sells. He's also very good at making baskets. Although no therapy is provided, "it's a stress-free environment which is in itself therapeutic."

The Workshop closes too early to suit Tony. By 2:30, still full of energy and wanting to do things, he's back at home.

"He needs to have something to do," Mrs. Birrell says. "If he can sit and chop vegetables for dinner he's happy. He really likes to help, especially if the work is constructive."

To help Tony fill in time, "there's a series of companions, mostly they're students, who come on shifts so there's always someone there. One of his companions talks to him by the hour about baseball games. We're trying to encourage him to talk about what's on tv."

Following the conversation, Tony says his favourite show is Wheel of Fortune and other game shows. He also appreciates it when someone describes what is happening on a sports broadcast.

"Definitely it's a whole lot better for us," Mrs. Birrell says of the arrangements. Previously, they were having to drive down to Peterborough every Friday, bring Tony home and then drive him back to Peterborough on Sunday. As they get older, this became more of a strain and now, ostensibly they only need make the journey once a month.

For this ease of mind, the Birrells are thankful for the help of their son Sidney, who now spends a lot of time making sure Tony's needs are met.

Getting to this point has been difficult and fraught with anxious moments. The situation is not yet ideal, but it's a vast improvement over living in a hospital. The house has given Tony much more than a proud sense of ownership; it gives him back his zest for life.

'I feel terrific. I have my dog, I have great independence,' says Tony, who spends one weekend a month at his parent's home on Soyers Lake. Misty is his constant companion.

Do you know the warning signs of a stroke?

The primary one is sudden, dramatic weakness or numbness of the face, arm and/or leg on one side of the body, which usually lasts for only a few minutes. Others include:

- temporary loss of speech, or trouble in speaking or understanding speech
- temporary dimness or loss of vision, particularly in one eye
- sudden, severe, unusual headaches, or a change in the pattern of headaches.

If you experience any of these problems, tell someone and call for emergency help. Know the telephone number of your local emergency medical care service and use it!

For more information on blood pressure or stroke, contact your local office of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario.

RESCUE BREATHING: 6 BASIC STEPS

1 Shake and shout gently.
Shake the person to see if he is conscious. Ask, "Are you OK?" If there is no response:

2 Call for help and tilt the head back gently, lift the chin to open the airway.

3 Look, listen & feel. Look at the chest to see if it is rising and falling. Listen for the sound of breathing. Feel for air escaping the mouth with your hand or cheek. If you cannot see, hear or feel breathing:

4 Pinch the nose and make a seal with your mouth on the victim's mouth and give two full breaths.

5 Turn your head and look, listen and feel.

6 Give a breath every 5 seconds. Continue until someone takes over from you.

IF ONLY THE WEATHER forecasters had known. Known that the muted grey skies provided the perfect backdrop for the brilliance of autumn leaves. Known that the warmth inside the artists' homes was guaranteed no matter what the temperatures outside. Or known that instead of mumbling and grumbling about their dire predictions, they should have looked inside the Studio Tour brochure to foretell just how wonderful a weekend it was going to be.

Then they too might have enjoyed what surely will be described as the most successful Haliburton County Studio Tour.

The line-ups of cars gathered outside dozens of local artisans' homes was a clear indication of people's hearty response to the invitation to visit. At Mary Wallace's, her husband and son even had to direct traffic as car upon car drove up the winding driveway.

"Every year you think 'Is anyone going to show up?' and here they are — it's been steady all day," Mrs. Wallace says as she greets people to her Lake Kashagawigamog studio. In the basement, one young girl is doing a silk painting of leaves, which she'll take home to the city. Her brother is picking out the silk-screened fish he wants to "catch" — since the family cottage is on Basshaunt Lake, the choice is made easier. Guest artist Audrey Grant, who cottages nearby and often goes on painting forays with Mrs. Wallace, is completing yet another painting which captures the beauty of the area. Inspiration is certainly not far away.

Outside, a couple is digging a plant out of the Wallace's garden — with permission. Others don't want to leave immediately either. They wander outside of the Wallaces' frame home, marvelling at the design and the lofty view. With the number of offers the Wallaces get to sell their home, you'd never think there was such a thing as a real estate slump.

Closer to Haliburton and with another colourful view of the Kashagawigamog chain, Lynne Hoppenreys says that as the women shop, the men are marvelling at the new addition to the house.

"The men want to know how you've renovated — I've had so many people into my cedar bathroom," she says, smiling. And no, the home-made preserves which line the kitchen aren't for sale.

With so many people inside the house, it's sometimes difficult to stand back and take it all in. Mrs. Hoppenreys paints "on unique handcrafted pine accessories designed with the country home in mind." Mindful of their homes back in the city, the hundreds of people who make their way through her studio want to take something of the country back with them.

"They're definitely in a spending mood," says Mrs. Hoppenreys, who also notices that more locals ## beautiful day for a Studio Tour.

are taking part in the tour. Her ironing board covers and goose magazine racks are the most popular, but there's at least one shopper who admits "my daughter is a loon nut." A loon key rack is held firmly in the daughter's hand, ready to be purchased before there are none left.

"I think we've done more talking than shopping," says Linda Elliott, known to many St. Paul's parishioners in Minden. Her travelling companion looks at her, laughs and shakes her head. "No, I think we're pretty well even," says Judy Davidson, whose husband's job has also taken her out of the area.

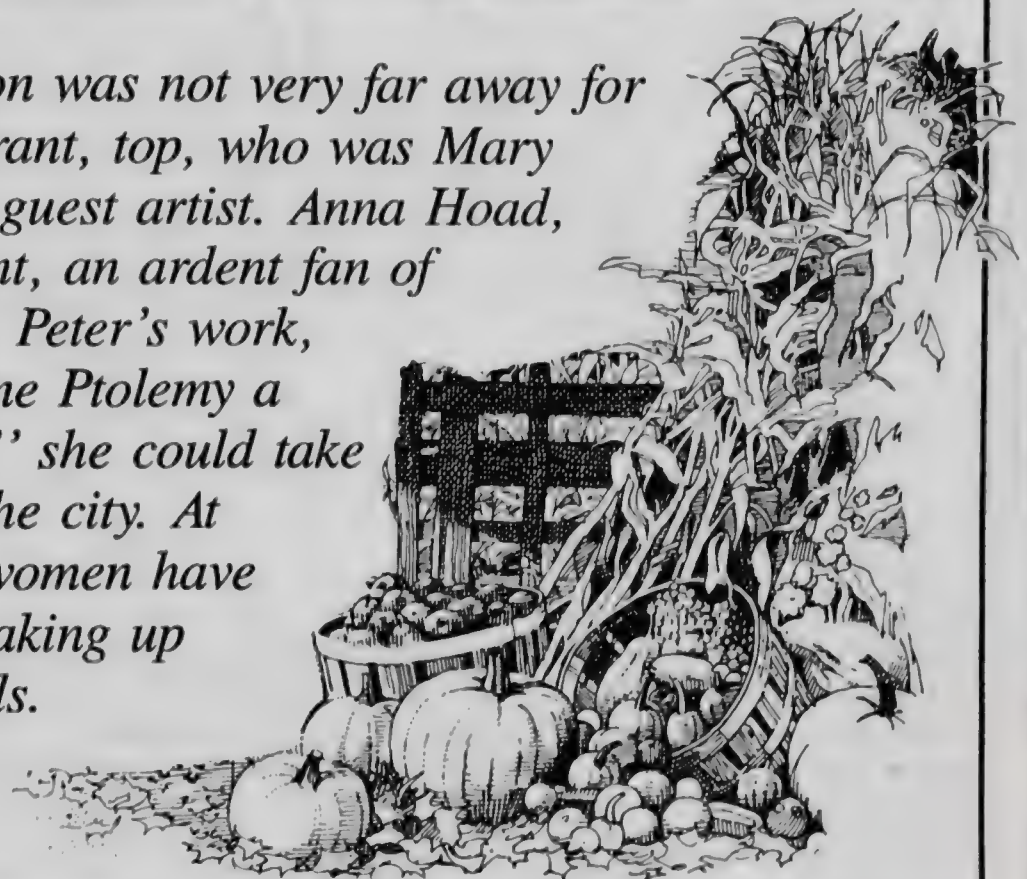

Besides the visiting, Mrs. Davidson took part in the tour to buy a teapot. When she left potter Ricki Woods', she didn't have a teapot — it's been commissioned, though — but she did have the four matching mugs. "What about the cream and sugar set?" Mrs. Elliott teases.

After checking up on the Hoppenreys' renovations, Gerald Irish lets his wife Joan continue shopping while he steps out on the porch. The owner of the Silver Maple Motel says the Studio Tour has positive economic repercussions for the whole area.

Please turn to page 28

COMMUNITY NEWS

TOAD AT HOAD HALL: Peter Hoad's whimsy is given fanciful expression at his Kashagawigamog home. With the bearded sculptor is Doug Ptolemy, a Kashagawigamog cottager who was taken part in the Studio Tour.

Studio Tour excuse for reunions

"We have a group of ladies at the motel who were nursing students together," Mr. Irish explains. "The Studio Tour is their reason for getting together and it's like a nurses' reunion."

Farther up Highway 121, along the leaf-swept Peninsula Drive, Joan and Peter Hoad are having another reunion of sorts. Her sister from Germany is here to visit — and fill the apple cider pitcher when empty — and their son and daughter delightfully extoll their parents' creative abilities. Late on Saturday afternoon, they are joined by Kashagawigamog cottagers, old friends who share the Hoads' artistic bent.

Laughter fills the air, adding even more colour to the surroundings. Mrs. Hoad's paintings, many with the welcomed red dot of a sale, line the wall of their house, their beauty competing with that of the outdoors'. Downstairs, Mr. Hoad's whimsy is given expression through his carvings — it's amazing what he can create with styrofoam to lift your spirits — but he is quick to take visitors outside again to show them his carved creatures of the garden.

Now does this sound like the dismal weekend the weathermen were predicting? After this weekend, they should know better. Maybe next year they'll leave their forecasts behind and learn how much enjoyment grey skies and the Studio Tour can offer.

Wilberforce fair results show community has much talent

The following are official results of the 7th annual Monmouth Agricultural Fair held recently in Wilberforce:

The Domestic Science exhibits noticeably increased from last year and there were many beautiful entries in knitting, crocheting and sewing as well as ceramics. The Produce section was not as competitive due to the late start in planting. The mouthwatering baked goods were the most difficult to be around all day and Pat Grant was the top first prize winner in that section.

In the Domestic Science competition, 11 firsts in Needlecraft went to Heather Hope of Minden, followed closely by Ethel Deterling and Joan Clark. Freida Evans took the majority of prizes in Canned Goods and Ida Holmes took the majority in the Floral section. Ida Holmes was once again, for the third year, the winner of the most points in the adult division and recipient of the Lions Club Trophy. Freida Evans was a close runner up. Aimee Swan of Harcourt was the winner of most points in the Junior Division, followed closely by Cassandra Packard.

Special Prizes for Points winners will be presented at the Annual Thanksgiving Supper on October 6 at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre.

First prize winners of the Chocolate Cake Special were: Ladies, Mrs. Hilda Greenwood of Irondale; Girls, Angela Duhn of Wilberforce; and Men or Boys, Jesse Packard of Highland Grove. These cakes were auctioned off to the highest bidders and netted close to $50. Organizers say they were especially pleased to have participation from the school children.

In the Poultry section, Paul Adams of Wilberforce received four firsts for his entry of Heavy Breed Hen and Rooster. Angela Duhn received first for her entry of light breed Hen & Rooster and Andrew Duhn received 2nd for his entry of Fancy Breed Hen & Rooster. Andrew Duhn received a first and second for this entry of Peking Ducks and also first for his Ring Neck Pheasant. Chris and Becky Pothaar received first prize for their entry of Cardiff Lake Rocks and Becky also took first for her Rabbit entry. Andrew Duhn received a first for Brucie and Lucy Goose.

The Mutt Show is always a lot of fun and the Grand Champion of the show went to Rhonda Francis' entry of Buckles from Minden. This entry also received a trophy donated by Martin's Techni-Cal Feed Mills of Elmira. The runners up were Mrs. Hellard entry, Puzzles, Clement Lake, and Dale McCrea's entry, Ike.

The Best behaved Dog award went to Amber Bunn of Minden who also received the Trophy donated by Gift House North, Haliburton, for the Obstacle Race. Best Dressed Dog went to Stacey Bunn; Best Groomed Dog went to Rhonda Francis; Dog with Longest Tail went to Clarence Rowbottom for King. Dog with Longest Nose went to Gillian Sawaged and the Smallest Dog entry and Dog with most Spots went to Heather Hope of Minden.

All winners in the Mutt Show received special prizes donated by Martins Techni-Cal Feed Mills.

The Heavy Horse Show with Single Horse Hitch and the Unicorn Hitch is always colourful with the shining Harness and glistening hardware. The Grand Champion Trophy went to Clayton Cameron of Minden and was donated by Ted and Ev Saxby. The Horse Draw is always a crowd pleaser and this year the following were first place winners:

Heavy Class, Keith Hobden of Lindsay, plus a trophy donated by employees of IGA Wilberforce.

Light Class, Grant Quinn of Cobocok, plus a trophy donated by Agnews Red & White, Wilberforce.

Ladies Single Horse winner was Joanne Barry of Omeme plus a trophy donated by Dennis Debler Well Drilling.

Dave Sisson of Minden received the trophy for the Best Dressed Team donated by Ken and Joan Noble.

Leo Wilkins of Flesherton received the trophy for the Best Teamster donated by Irene and Harvey Somerville.

Kevin McLeary of Cheltenham received the trophy for the team from the farthest distance donated by Dennis Debler Water Wells.

Congratulations and best wishes on their marriage to Jean Thomas, daughter of Lois and the late Max Boice, and Tim Hancock, son of Max and Marg Hancock of Irondale. The wedding took place at the home of the groom's sister, Joyce Brown, at Highland Trail Lodge on Lake Solerno. Judy Johnson was bridesmaid, Jessica Hancock the flower girl, with Shirley Howe, Amanda-Jo Thomas and Fay Dewey complementing the bridal party. The best man was Joe Hancock with ushers Wilf Hancock, Ben Thomas and Gary Dewey. Mitchell Johnson was ring-bearer. The reception and dance at the Legion as well as the wedding were well attended by the many relatives and friends of both Jean and Tim.

Bingo is a popular, and lucrative, word

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Congratulations to Glenda Benson of Victoria Road who was the lucky winner of $580 dollars when she called "bingo" on the final number of the bingo jackpot at Kirkfield Lions bingo on September 25. Thirteen was definitely Glenda's lucky number.

There was a good crowd out to the Kirkfield Lions Bingo even though it was a very rainy evening.

Royal Canadian Legion Branch 441 Kinmount held their "55 Alive" Drive Program on September 24 and 25 in the Legion Hall. Some 20 (mostly Seniors) attended and it was well done. The Ladies Auxiliary made a delicious lunch.

Also at the Kinmount Legion during Legion Week, on September 18 a bingo was held with 18 attending. Special guest was four-year-old Michelle Swanum who received a prize for attending; Mary Hartin Sr. and Lila Shans were the big winners for the night. Again the Kinmount Ladies Auxiliary served lunch. Everyone enjoyed the evening.

Kinmount United Church is holding a bake sale and flea market from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, October 6 at Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station.

The Coboconk Legion Branch 519 will be holding a huge yard sale in their grounds on Saturday October 6 from 11:00 a.m. on. There will be two vans included in this sale.

Congratulations to Cuthbert Lamb who is a familiar face in our part of the country every summer from the U.S. and who enters preserves made by himself while here, in the Lindsay Fair Home Ec. This year "our" Cuthbert took first prize for his white currant jam, first for strawberry jam, second place for his chokecherry jelly and second also for grape jelly. He took a third for crabapple jelly and a third for his pickled onions. Way to go "Cuth"! Have a lovely trip home after Thanksgiving and I look forward to your annual letter.

Norland Area Seniors have settled on December 5 for their Christmas dinner, at the Coboconk Legion Hall. It was also suggested at the Seniors meeting of September 13 that a bursary of some type be provided for an elementary student.

Sincere sympathy to all the family and friends of Diane Smoke nee Hughes, who died recently. Diane was a daughter to the late Vi Henderson and to Late stepfather Charlie Henderson formerly of Kinmount.

A memo to the folks who send me items through the mail for the column: I live in Norland and your letters are still being sent to Kinmount. By the time I get them, often it's too late to get into print.

Syd Cilcus of Kirkfield is home from hospital but suffered a set back and as of September 23 was hoping to be back to her bingo games in a week which brings it out to October 2 and that happens to be my sixty-eighth. Ugh!! I'm going to hang in there though.

The trees are starting to look beautiful again. Shouldn't be too long before the Fall Tour Bus Trips take place.

We've seen a number of deer, fox, raccoons and skunk along the roadsides recently.

The Victoria County Fund Raising was held recently at Oakwood with approximately 120 in attendance. The Seniors Band from Bobcaygeon was there with Fred Taylor, Coboconk Square Dancers ("Happy Hoofers"), Aggie Brown Hawaiian Ribbon Dance — Norland, Square Dancers from Coboconk, Hawaiian Dancers from Valentia, Happy Wanderers' Choral Group from Coboconk and Bert Adams was there with his "sexy" dancing partner Sophie. Prizes went to Les Thomas of Norland and to a lady, each eighty-seven years of age as the eldest folks there. Draw winners were: Isabel Hill of Norland, Marg Noble and Jack Lewis both of Coboconk. There was a reading on a visit to Europe by Ellen Grills. "Born Before 1940", read by Kay Thomas, was also enjoyed. M.C. was Ed Coppin from Norland and Area Representative for Victoria County. Approximately $425. was cleared. Everyone enjoyed the day very much.

Everyone is invited to come to the Fenelon Lanes and join in the bowling fun each Wednesday at 1 p.m.

Well folks, that's it for another week, stay well and happy and give me a call at 454-2395 if you wish your news in this column.

Meeting is held for seniors

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

On Sept. 30th the Lake of Bays United Church Charge will have a combined service of all three churches, at Stewart Memorial Church, at Dwight. This will be at 10:00 a.m. and the service will be followed with a Pot Luck lunch. This is the only service on that day and they hope to have a good attendance from all points.

We are always happy to announce a blessed event and on August 7th John and Karen Munro became the happy parents of twin girls, Fiona weighing 6 lbs 4 oz and Heather, weighing 6 lbs 14 oz. All the family are doing well. The babies were born at Huntsville Hospital. Congratulations to all.

A St. John's Ambulance First Aid course is being planned for the near future at the Dorset Elementary School. Twelve applicants must be promised in order to have a class. There will be 12 hours of instruction, from 7-10 on Wed. November 7 and 14 and from 7-10 on Thursday, November 8. The fee is $44.50 per person. This is an involved course and well worthwhile. Everyone should know what to do in case of emergency.

An Advisory Council from the office of the Minister of Senior Citizen's Affairs held a consultative meeting in Minden recently, which was attended by several members of the Dorset Senior Club. Mary Johnson, who is a board member of the Haliburton Home Support Service, was one of the members who attended. She reports that many areas were represented and there was much discussion of the needs of Seniors in the rural areas. Transportation to medical appointments and other necessary trips was considered one of the priorities. The Haliburton Home Support Service has Meals-on-Wheels, Meals to Wheels and other services available in Dorset, and this applies to the Muskoka side of Dorset and the Baysville area. You may call Mary Johnson at 776-9362 for more information. This service can only be of use to you if your needs are known.

The A.C.W. held a meeting recently to discuss future activities. It was an evening meeting with dessert and coffee being served.

Village sends condolences

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomas and family and Mr. and Mrs. LaVerne Thomas were in Scarborough attending the funeral of Doris Thomas, wife of Wilmot, usually known here as Cuff Thomas who died Thursday after a lengthy illness. Our sympathies to the family.

Birthday congratulations to Annie Misco who celebrates her 91st this week. Family and friends are invited to attend a celebration at the Minden Community Centre on Saturday October 6th at 8:00 p.m.

Mrs. Bill McKay spent a few days visiting with relatives in the Bancroft area.

Our condolences to Freda Briscoe and family for the death of a loving husband and father. Fred died last week. They are thought of fondly by many people in the area for their fish and chips at Halls Lake in the fifties, when that was the only place to buy English Style and one could always meet friends there.

Don't forget to take in the Bake Sale and Bazaar at Maple Lake United Church on Saturday Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Fall drives make for a pleasant, pretty week

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Thursday morning, since it was sometime since we had gone in the bus, Doris thought it would be different to have a drive in the morning, to see the changes in the leaves instead of having Fun and Fitness. We left Hyland Crest about 9:30, and went to Haliburton where we stopped, and bought two dozen assorted donuts as a treat. We returned via Donald, Lochlin and the South Lake Road, and were home by eleven o'clock. We enjoyed the ride very much, and thank Doris, and Gladys Bowman for making it happen.

In the afternoon the Kinmount Ladies of the Legion Auxiliary provided the lunch for our tea party. It was served by Mary Hartin, Gladys Silver, Julie Grozelle and Cecile Shetler. We enjoyed the lunch, and a social time with the ladies, whom we thank for their efforts.

Friday, Happy Hour was held again. Those who were here to provide the entertainment were Mike Biagi playing the mouth organ, Connie Biagi-guitar, Frank Faulkner-violin, and Doris-Piano. The residents and friends enjoyed the music greatly, and thank them. We also thank the volunteers who looked after everyone's comfort, Ellen and Don Holden, and Mary Guillemain.

Sunday my niece, her mother, and father came from Peterborough, and took me for a drive, and we had dinner out. As much as we appreciate all the outings we have, it's so comforting when our families come to take us out and we do thank them.

Sunday night chapel was conducted by Rev. John Burgess, and Alice Jones played the organ. As usual we had an interesting service and we thank Mr. Burgess, and Alice very much. Leon Jones spent the time with his mother Annie Jones who is very ill.

Monday afternoon was the first Auxiliary meeting since summer began. There was much to catch up on, and new plans for the coming year.

Monday evening Dorothy Hunter showed two films. The first one was "Freaky Friday," and the second was "Winter in Ontario with Hagood Hardy".

Tuesday morning chapel service was taken by Evelyn Coleman. She told us a story about a porcupine, who had never had a hug because he was so prickly. The porcupine is just like some people who make you think they don't want a hug, because they say or act as though they don't want any one to care about them, when that is just what they need. Thank you Evelyn, and have a good holiday.

This week, three residents had birthdays. Ann Collison was Sept. 20/90, Cora Upton was Sept. 22/90, and Maron Rose was Sept. 23/90; a happy birthday to you all. Mary Oliver, also had a birthday on Sept. 26, her one hundred and first. We all congratulate her and wish her a very happy birthday.

Tuesday afternoon, Doris took some of the residents on a bus ride to Kinmount, and Bobcaygeon to see the colored leaves. They were so beautiful near Bobcaygeon. They are not turned as much as they are this way. Of course we had our treat at Kawartha Dairy. We thank Doris our driver, Gladys Bowman, Doris's helper on activities and Jankie, a volunteer. Also those who helped load and unload the bus. They are a wonderful help.

Last Thursday evening we had bingo with two ladies calling for us. Bev Formenko, and Marg Prentice. This Thurs. Sept. 20 Sheila Correll, and Marg Prentice called. We thank them sincerely.

This winter the wives of the Kinsmen Club are coming in pairs to call the bingo and the Kinsmen are providing the prizes, as they did last winter. We have had two evenings of bingo towards the contest now.

STARTING ANOTHER CENTURY: This certainly doesn't happen every day. Last week, Hyland Crest in Minden held birthday celebrations for three women who are now 101 years old: Mary Oliver, Lillian Curry (who'll be 102 in December) and Isabella Eastman. Throughout the week, they had special teas and visitors as everyone took time to congratulate them on reaching such a milestone.

Agricultural Society plans a big dinner

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

The seasons are changing too quickly. October's glorious colours arrived in September and the Canada geese are already flying south. September also brought early mail reminders of coming Christmas shopping and hockey games are in full swing. Let's hope our dreamy Indian Summer days don't bring an early snow fall.

From Oct. 7th to the 13th, Monmouth Township will celebrate Fire Prevention Week. The Monmouth Volunteer Firemen will hold an open house at the Fire Hall in Wilberforce on Oct. 13th from 1 until 3 p.m. During the week a poster contest will take place at the elementary school and on Friday at 11 a.m. a full fire drill will be held in the school grounds to acquaint the pupils with all aspects of fire control and first response work.

One event that never fails to please is the annual Thanksgiving dinner provided by members of the Agricultural Society. This coming Saturday, October 6th, one of their delicious meals will be served at the Lloyd Watson Centre from 5 until 7 p.m. You will not be disappointed so bring along a good appetite.

On Monday October 22 classes for the Harcourt Art Group will resume for the Winter. This is a golden opportunity for those who love to draw with valuable guidance provided by qualified teachers. Though it is difficult to believe, there is no charge for instruction. Interest and enthusiasm shown by the pupils, who may be of any age, is reward enough for the teachers. Classes held Monday evenings at 7 and Tuesday afternoons 1 to 3. Everybody welcome. Call Claire Loft at 448-2550 or Marian Donovan at 448-2617 for further information.

An updated Loop telephone directory is available at the Montage Real Estate Office, recently located beside the Arena. This handy booklet in easy read print, lists the phone numbers of Gooderham, Harcourt, Harcourt Park, Highland Grove, Irondale, Tory Hill, Wilberforce and adjoining lake areas. Drop in at the office for your free copy.

Young people interested in future education can pick up a Sheridan College 1991-92 calendar at the Library.

Volunteers are needed

The Victoria-Haliburton branch of the Canadian Cancer Society is looking for people who are interested in helping out a very worthwhile cause.

These could be people of any age and background. The only prerequisite for becoming a Cancer Society board member or volunteer is a willingness to help others.

There are many people in the community whose lives have been affected in one way or another by cancer. Those who are looking for a way to help can do so by contacting the Cancer Society office for further details. The office, located at 18 Cambridge St. S. in Lindsay, can be contacted by calling 324-6896.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Car destroyed by fire

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

Mr. Robert "Bud" Herbert of Thunder Bay has been visiting his parents, Robert and Norma Herbert, and catching up on local news.

Sincere sympathy goes out to Helen Powell, and other family members, in the death of their mother, Mrs. Ann Ballam of Victoria Road, last week.

We had occasion to journey to Harcourt last Sunday and on the way home stopped by to say hello to Mr. and Mrs. Ted Sheehy at Wilberforce.

On Monday morning Sept. 24th just before 7:30 a.m. a car took fire just south of the village. I understand the car was driven by John Chamberlain, and the driver escaped unhurt. The Coboconk Bealey Fire Dept. responded quickly but the car was destroyed.

Last Saturday was a very beautiful day, weatherwise, and a beautiful day for George Shepherd Senior, now eighty years old, because George journeyed all the way to Toronto to see the Blue Jay's play ball — and he had a look at the famous Toronto Sky-Dome. He told me he had never seen a ball game — live that is — so was very excited about the trip. George has been ill a lot the past several months and it's good to know George can still enjoy himself at a ball game!!

On Wednesday Sept. 26th the Coby Seniors held their executive meeting at the Civitan House, and drew the tickets for prizes in their raffle. Ticket number 210, won the quilt, and the lucky quilt winner was Joan Crilly of Richmond Hill: Second Prize of $50. was won by Claire Atkins of Whitby. The third Prize of a book of Wintario tickets was won by Margaret Causton of Oakville. The Seniors wish to thank everyone who purchased tickets in their fund raising project.

Your many friends hope you continue to improve, George Suggitt, after your admittance to hospital. I understand you are now out of Intensive Care and doing well. Just be a good guy and do as the doctor orders you to do!!

Shawn Angiers, a student at the University of Waterloo, was home for the weekend, with his mother Deb Angiers, and Grandmother, Rene Angiers.

Congratulations Winne Cook on your 80th birthday on Sept. 26th. I won't tell a soul your age! You look great!!

Coboconk Public School is going to let parents and public know that they are a busy and involved group. They are stressing manners and treating each other in more respectful ways. They have elected a student council with Chris Broumley as President. Vice President is Barret Ruttan and Treasurer is Jim Herd. The Gr. 5 & 6 students enjoyed a guided tour at Lindsay Fair by the Junior Farmers on Agriculture and Food. The Kawartha Region Conservation Authority organized a tour for Gr. 1 and 2 students and teacher Mrs. Kooeger on Sept. 14th to Indian Point.

Two new house leagues at Coboconk School have been organized called "Spitfires" and "Hawkes". Team three is called "Wild Things" and Team Four is called "Cobras". Sounds mysterious!

The "55 Alive" drivers program is all set to go at the Coboconk Lions Community Hall on Wednesday Oct. 3rd and again on Oct. 10th. Registration fee is $25. for two days with driver-in-car examination. While a lot of seniors do a lot of driving and are pretty well up on all the rules of the road, many are sort of "rusty", since they do not drive much and would panic at the thought of driving in a big city, or even Highway 401. These classes would be a big help.

Will we — or won't we — get the sewers in town next year? We surely do need them, but can a water treatment area be agreed upon, and keep the majority happy? We hope so!!

Little Travis Wilson, son of Ron and Debbie Wilson recently went through a terrifying experience when the little one year old began choking on a small bit of carrot. He was rushed to Lindsay, then on the St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough, where he had to have surgery and the tiny bit of carrot was removed from his lung. He is now doing just fine.

Mrs. Lena Baker of Toronto visited her sister, Mr. & Mrs. Chester Godwin (Marion) at Burnt River and also her brother, Emmerson Otto at Pinecrest Nursing Home at Bobcaygeon.

There is a Toddler Clinic for 3-3 1/2 yr. old children at the Health Unit office in Lindsay. The clinic takes in Vision Screening, Hearing Screening, Speech Screening and Immunization Assessment. Phone 324-3569 for more information on this programme.

With longer dark evenings now is the time to visit our local library. The hours are Mon. 1-3:30 p.m.; Tues. 1-3:30 — 7-8 p.m.; Thurs. 1-3:30 — 7-8 p.m.; and Friday 1-3:30 p.m. Note that library is closed on Saturday.

If you are interested in Bev's Fitness Classes at the Coboconk Community Hall Mon. and Wed. evenings 5:30-6:30 p.m. and Saturday mornings at 10 a.m. you can call her at 454-2356.

A Jack and Jill Dance was held for Danny Brohm and Tracy Cook at Coboconk last weekend.
